Mile High Money!

After 25 years in the business, I've come to the conclusion that there's never going to be a find of any type of collectibles as incredible as the late Edgar Church's collection of comics.

In fact, it's my goal to reunite that collection. That's why we're publishing an exclusive "Buy List" for comics from the Mile High Collection and paying instant cash in multiples of Guide for the right comics.

This is going to be an on-going project, but you can find the first edition of the Buy List on-line at www.diamondgalleries.com or the pages of Comic Book Marketplace #61 & 62. This list quotes the prices we're offering in addition to the titles we're looking for.

If you've got one or more comics from the Mile High Collection (particularly those NM to NM+), I urge you to review our Buy List at once.

Invigoration — and learning lessons

I'm back in the office — probably before most readers even realize I was on vacation. It was delightful, informative, productive — and led to a return to an office piled with a stack of unopened mail more than two feet high.

The beginning of the time out of the office was spent at the Friends of Lulu conference in Newark — an example of what can be done to get things going constructively in this industry. The wrap-up session produced a list of outreach efforts which builds on some of the strategies comics folks are already using around the country. I'll tell you more about some of these projects in times to come, but an additional pleasure of the meetings was the enthusiasm at their root. Combining that with productive brainstorming, the event was invigorating.

Amusingly, the following weekend demonstrated how not to hold an event — in the nightmare that I found via the Antiques Roadshow in Milwaukee.

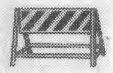
Background: Antiques Roadshow is (according to an article in the April 1, 1998, issue of the Chicago Tribune) the most-watched prime-time series on PBS this year. The show involves interviews with people who have brought in odd old items to find out what they are and what they are worth. It's based on a British show of the same name that's been running for almost two decades; the American version has been running for two years.

Given that history, you might think its organizers would have some clues as to how to run such an event. After all, a year ago, "At the Phoenix Civic Plaza ... the doors to the building had to be shut only four hours after the staff had finished hanging pink 'Roadshow' banners ... The facility had reached its capacity of 6,000 people looking for a free appraisal of their possessions."

I found no hint of this at the show's website, which was where I found the notice that it would be in Milwaukee on Saturday, June 20, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. I dutifully noted the restrictions it did give, realized from watching the show that there would be thousands of people in line, and downloaded the instructions for getting to the site — figuring that a day standing in line would be worth it to find out (1) how to display some odd family heirlooms and (2) how to get one of them mended. Besides, my daughter, Valerie, would be along, so I'd have someone to talk to. [And this is your cue to start analyzing how this applies to comics conventions — which is the subtext of this week's editorial.]



So what happened? We set out extra early, timing our departure so as to get there well before the doors were to open. In this we were thwarted by construction on the highway I had chosen. The construction was not mentioned on the clear directions on the website, though it had obviously been under way long before the information was posted. Valerie and I had seen lots of road construction in the preceding week, as we drove cross-country from New York to Wisconsin. This was the only case in which (a) three lanes were funneled into one and (b) neither barrels nor human resources were employed so as to minimize stalled traffic.

Moreover, the clear website instructions told us to take an exit that was not available, also thanks to the construction. Milwaukee is not impossible to get around in, and we made it back to the site by using city streets. But then, we faced the puzzle of finding a parking garage in a maze of "do not enter this garage from this street" signs. (Downtown Milwaukee is also currently under construction. Gen Con attendees, please note.)

We finally found a working garage entrance and an ensuing parking place and headed for the convention center before 11 a.m., toting our stuff. We got in line and slowly walked forward with it in 90°+ weather, accompanying our fellow attendees. After half an hour (with a patient, exuberant, friendly crowd — all expecting a long, hot wait but happy to be there), we saw a woman coming down the line. When she got to us, she told us all to go home. Smiling broadly, she said there had been 2,000 people there when the doors had opened (big surprise) and that they had counted off 7,000 people, so the 50 of us beyond that should leave.

Keep in mind that the organizers had handled two previous seasons, including at least one case in which people had had to be turned away. By this time, had they behaved like professionals, they should have had a pretty good idea of how much time would be spent per consultation — and, therefore, what number of people could be accommodated in what length of time by what number of appraisers. (Disneyland puts up signs which say something like, "At this point, you will wait 45 minutes to get on this ride." Surely, a rough formula could be employed to permit signage like, "At this point, there will probably be a wait of at least two hours." That would have additionally served to tip off the organizers that there was a problem — and might have shortened the line, if there were attendees who would deem the wait not worth it.)

I have a friend who used to manage the confessional line at St. Patrick's Cathedral whose reaction was, "You never cut off people who have been waiting in line! You identify the problem and then put a barrier at the end of the line to say no more can be accepted — but you always take the people who have been waiting."

So there you have it:

- wrong directions
- no advance notice of a potential cut-off or suggested deadline time of arrival
- no estimate by experienced organizers of what crowd size would be a problem
- aggravation of a bad situation by arbitrarily turning away people who had already waited more than half an hour

Valerie is steamed enough that she will simply never watch the show again. I may — someday — though, once out of the habit of watching a show, I almost never return to viewing. Can you translate our reactions to advice to comics conventions and professional con and store signings? I knew you could.

— Maggie Thompson

Diamond will ship early to large-volume retailers

Texas uproar forces decision on limited street-date program

By Michael Dean

In a sudden change of policy, Diamond Comic Distributors has agreed to ship comic books a day early to high-volume multi-store businesses, with the requirement that the comics not be put out until the prevalent on-sale date in the store's area.

Prior to this, Diamond has always shipped new comics for Wednesday arrival to ensure that all shops get their products at the same time and none can put the comics on sale earlier than Wednesday. A nationwide "street date" program, under which comics could be shipped earlier while retailers are required to observe an agreed-upon on-sale date, has long been hotly debated in the direct market. Diamond said it has resisted implementation of such a program because of the difficulty of monitoring retailers to ensure that no comics are put out early.

The controversy. The new policy change was precipitated by a controversy that arose in Texas when retailers discovered that Diamond was shipping early to certain retailers. Rumors began circulating that Diamond was on the verge of launching a street-date program or was giving preferential treatment to certain retailers.

What the alarmed Texas retailers did not know was that, from the time it took over the operations of Capital Distribution, Diamond Comic Distributors had been shipping comics to some high-volume stores on Tuesdays with the proviso that each store not put them out until Wednesday or the prevalent on-sale day in the store's area. Following the consolidation of Diamond's Dallas distribution center, Diamond had agreed to expand the early shipments to two Dallas-area retailers. It was these early shipments that were eventually noticed.

Once the cat was out of the bag, Diamond Vice President of Marketing Roger Fletcher told CBG, the distributor had to decide whether to eliminate the early shipments altogether or extend them to all stores that meet specific volume requirements. After hastily convened meetings, Fletcher told CBG June 25 that Diamond had decided to extend the policy.

"This is a practice that we inherited from Capital," Fletcher said. "We have obviously not promoted it as a program. The idea was not to give these retailers an advantage, but we acquiesced to their argument that, for business reasons, stores that deal in very high volume need more time in order to get their comics on the shelves by the same time as people with smaller operations."

According to Diamond Executive Vice President and COO Chuck Parker, the new policy formalizes Tuesday multi-store release criteria which have evolved in recent years. "When Diamond acquired Capital in 1996, we learned that Capital had allowed a handful of large multi-store retailers to receive their new releases on Tuesdays," he said. "Similarly, Heroes World allowed a number of large, multi-store retailers to receive their Marvel shipments several days ahead of the Wednesday on-sale day. This led to several requests for Diamond to do the same.

"We listened to these requests and came to the conclusion that large, multi-store retailers have legitimate business reasons for wanting Tuesday release. It takes large chain-store operations turning in a single order form longer to receive and process their weekly shipments, and, without the Tuesday release, they are effectively at a disadvantage to single-store operations, which can more easily have new releases on their shelves when they open on Wednesday."

Diamond's early shipments to those few stores that had asked for them had proceeded without incident until recently. "We had added a couple of [Texas] retailers who asked and were qualified," said Fletcher. "Now there has been a lot of concern expressed in the Texas area by other retailers, and, due to the uproar, we [had to] re-examine this practice."

The requirements. For the stores that would be affected by the new policy, Diamond has established strict ground rules: The separate storefronts must be under common majority ownership. The customer must submit a single, consolidated Previews order form for all stores. The customer must have maintained a minimum Previews ordering level of $40,000 per month in total retail and net cost value for three consecutive months immediately prior to the effective date for Tuesday delivery — and must maintain the ordering level for each month thereafter. What is most important: The retailer may not place new releases on sale or deliver new releases under subscription buying arrangements prior to the prevailing Wednesday on-sale time in each store's area. The customer may not place reorders for new releases or report shortages or damages to a shipment before 11 a.m. local time on Wednesday.

Parker said, "If we were going to allow Tuesday release for our larger customers, we had to make sure we wouldn't be putting all our other customers at a disadvantage. That's why those few who may get their shipments on Tuesday have to agree not to put them on sale before others in their area can do so — and why they can't call in reorders, shortages, and damages until others can do the same."

The consequences. Parker acknowledged that the program may be unpopular with some Diamond customers. "We know that single-store operators and those with smaller chains may also have legitimate reasons for wanting their comics on Tuesday but we're just not able, at this time, to orchestrate or police a wide-scale early-release program. Our effort was to develop objective criteria [for a plan] that recognizes the legitimate needs of multi-store operations which buy on a consolidated basis and at the same time is workable for Diamond and maintains a competitive balance between those operations and stores that do not qualify for the program."

Parker also commented that logistics may make it economically unviable for some retailers to participate, even though they may qualify. "We may not be able to reach everyone on Tuesday. A large, multi-store customer in a two-day UPS zone, for example, may find it prohibitively expensive to receive his or her shipments on Tuesday."

Fletcher cautioned retailers that any policy allowing early availability of product must come with "the caveat that we cannot police everybody to make sure everybody is following the rules."

Fletcher said he remains skeptical of the viability of an across-the-board street-date program, but noted that, if the large-volume stores are able to abide by the rules, the question is bound to arise: "Why wouldn't it work for everybody?"

Diamond invited customers with questions or feedback on the program to contact their Customer Service Representative.

COMING IN SEPTEMBER TO A COMICS STORE NEAR YOU!

VIZ COMICS™

Kingdom's Coming. DC has revealed the next phase for concepts introduced in Mark Waid's and Alex Ross' Kingdom Come. After two years of baby steps and false starts that have included a single one-shot gig as part of 1997's "New Years Evil" fifth-week event and a long-in-development and delayed ongoing series, "The Kingdom Event" is the tentative title of seven one-shots, all appearing in December of this year.

While all issues will be written by Waid and illustrated by different artists, five titles will appear during one week of that month, with two bookend titles shipping a week before and a week after. Details are still being finalized, but plans call for the issues to focus on such characters as Nightstar, Ibn Al X'uffasch, and Kid Flash.

"I have to admit, particularly after some of the creative twists and turns the project has taken, even I was skeptical as to whether 'Kingdom' was still something readers wanted to see," said Waid. "But Grant Morrison, Tom Peyer, Dan Raspler, and I talked about it extensively during the last JLA summit a few weeks ago, ideas started flying fast and furious, and now I literally cannot wait to hit the keyboard."

Not dead yet. Writer Scott Lobdell has taken the reins of a two-part prestige-format Incredible Hulk project that began life as a proposed follow-up to Peter David's 1996 limited series Future Imperfect. However, due to David's decision to make Incredible Hulk #467 his last word on the character (as reported previously in Scouting Report), the project has evolved into something other than a revisitation of the world of The Maestro. Thanks to the changes, Lobdell has been tapped to write the two-issue project. "A Future Imperfect follow-up was discussed, but I feel that is very much Peter's story," said Lobdell. "After all those years on the series, he deserves that consideration."

Penciled by German (X-Men) Garcia, the project is tentatively titled Incredible Hulk: Someone to Talk To and is a stand-alone story that ties directly into David's last Hulk story arc. "The storyline involves Bruce Banner convincing Thor to take him through Hel and into the Cosmic Hub of the Afterlife so that he can talk to Betty," said Lobdell.

The two-issue special ships in November and December.

Nova back for late '98. Adding to his Wolverine and Aquaman writing gigs, Erik Larsen recently confirmed that he'll be handling a new Nova series for Marvel later this year, along with a penciller yet to be named. The new series focuses on Richard Rider (aka Nova) and his roommates who share his secret. The trio attends junior college together by day and fight crime on weekends and after class.

"Nova wants to fight crime and make it on his own as a super-hero, but his roommates see all the possibilities that having a super-hero around the house could lead to," Larsen said. "They scheme together on finding ways of getting rich utilizing Nova's powers, using his abilities as transportation for dream vacations and whatever else a couple of fellows might dream up."

According to Larsen, the appeal of the series and the character is simple: Readers can relate to Nova. "Richard Rider is an average Joe who struggles to get Cs," Larsen said. "This gives the character potentially wider audience empathy. It also makes him a bigger screw-up, which everybody can identify with. Nova is just the kind of series I'd love to do. Naturally, there will be tons of cool bad guys both old and new, but the drive of the series is these three idiots trying to share an apartment and a secret."

Time is on our side. Combining old with new, DC will launch a new ongoing Hourman series this November. Written by Tom Peyer and pencilled by Rags Morales, the new Hourman series will feature the Hourman from the 853rd century, who made his debut in the JLA: Rock of Ages story arc and plays a major role in DC's upcoming "One Million" crossover. While this Hourman will have ties to the original Hourman, there will be a few differences.

"Hourman is a two-year-old android from the 853rd century, programmed with Miraclo software based on DNA carried down through the bloodline of Rex Tyler, the Golden Age Hourman," Peyer said. "Thus, though our Hourman is a machine, he is also a 'descendant' of Tyler's."

Due to events in "One Million," Hourman will opt to return to the late 20th century, where he becomes best friends with Snapper Carr. Promising a return to a style of storytelling that would make Gardner Fox and John Broome proud, Peyer guaranteed plenty of action, science, and crazy times ahead. "We'll be playing with time the way Flash stories play with speed or the early Atom stories played with size," Peyer said. "He'll fight Amazo, intersect with the brief, tragic life of android Leaguer Tomorrow Woman, encounter the late, original Hourman and ingest the last Miraclo pill, and fight Epoch, the Lord of Time [last seen in JLA/WildC.A.T.S]. If that's not enough, he'll make the mistake of eavesdropping on a close friend's future and languish in the Endlessly Repeating Day of No Hope, Nov. 22, 1963."

It was 10 years ago: Cleveland's International Superman Exposition — June 16-19, 1988

By Greg W. Myers

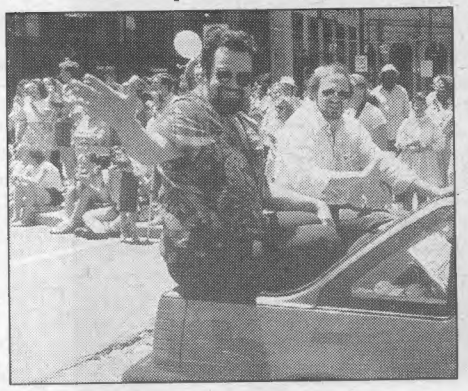
Although memories of the event bring up mixed emotions in some of the event organizers today, for those fans in attendance at The International Superman Exposition in downtown Cleveland, Ohio, June 16-19, 1988, the memories include:

• An all-star line-up of guests from the worlds of comic books, television, film, and science fiction.

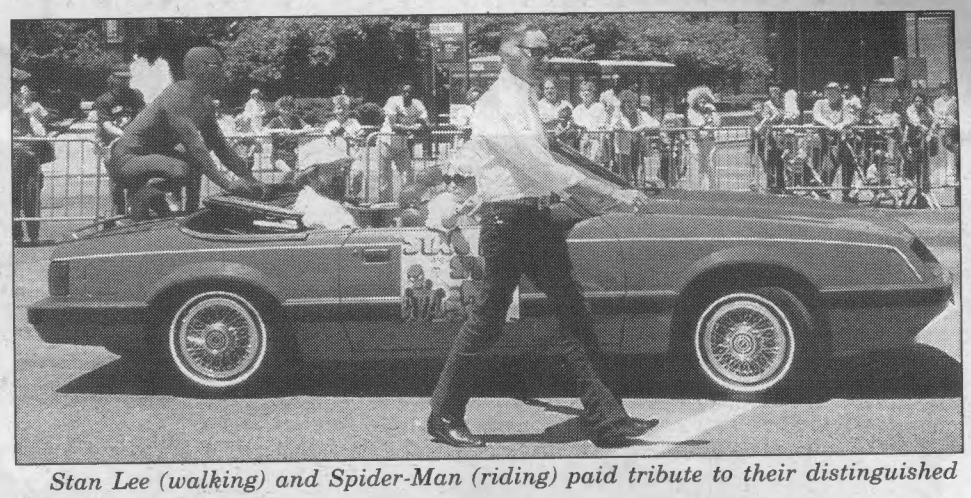
• A 100-plus-unit ticker-tape parade through the streets of downtown Cleveland, complete with marching bands and floats.

• A display of the most pieces of original Superman artwork ever assembled, from the collections of numerous fans, dealers, and collectors, as well as movie costumes and other memorabilia.

• Discussion panels, autograph sessions, speakers, a charity auction, and more — all to honor the creators of the greatest super-hero of all.



George Pérez and Marv Wolfman rode in the parade.



Stan Lee (walking) and Spider-Man (riding) paid tribute to their distinguished competition's character.

The Expo was the result of more than two years of effort by the non-profit organization Neverending Battle Inc., with the cooperation of DC Comics, to honor Cleveland natives and Superman creators Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster. It was timed to coincide with the 50th anniversary of the first publication of comic-book adventures of The Man of Steel.

Neverending Battle had lofty goals for The International Superman Exposition, including the intent to raise enough money to fund the creation of a larger-than-life Superman statue to honor Siegel and Shuster — and to look into the possibility of establishing a museum of comics and science fiction in their name — both to be located in their home town of Cleveland, which welcomed the plans.

However, when it was over, paid attendance to the Expo had fallen far short of expectations, and other fund-raising efforts weren't able to bring in sufficient funds to pay the bills. Costs and expenses were more than the organization could cover, and Neverending Battle Inc. ended up in bankruptcy. Individuals involved in that organization, including two CBG columnists, lost thousands of dollars of their own money in the attempt to bring the dream of an International Superman Exposition to reality.

Today, they don't look back at the event

(Continues on Page 12)

Harlan Ellison was welcomed back to his hometown for the Expo.

THE ADVENTURES OF MAX FARADAY

cover by JIM LEE & TROY HUBBS
Divine Right created by JIM LEE
Jim Lee's Font created by JIM LEE & JG
Jim Lee created by JIM'S MOM & DAD

MAX FARADAY (The Chosen One): He's just a struggling twenty year old who accidentally discovers the answer to the cosmos. Undergrad student and part-time pizza delivery boy, poor Max can't get a date and has few friends, but possesses the heart and courage of a hero.

DEVAN LAWLESS (The Happy-go-lucky One): A crude yet bright computer science graduate student, Devan befriends Max with the hopes of dating Max's older sister, Jenny Faraday, a natural beauty who couldn't give a rat's ass about Devan.

HIP FLASK (The Really Fat One): Harder than Rockford, more Frank than Cannon, but not quite as Foxy as Mulder, his mother named him Hieronymous Flask; only his colleagues call him "Hip". The people that know him really well don't call him at all.

VANITY CASE (The Hot One): Agent Case is Courtenay Cox and Michelle Yeoh rolled into one. Given a chance, Hip would like to be the one doing the rolling. Flask has crossed Vanity's path many times. Given a chance, Vanity would like to cross Hip's path with an Industrial Road Flattener.

IN CASE YOU'RE JUST JOINING US...
Formation Agency has been shut down, and I-Agents Flask and Case assigned to a routine stakeout on Pacific Beach in San Diego. ver, when Hip steps through the doorway of Phatboy's Phizza up six Vegetarian Specials with extra cheese, the mysterious 's known only as The Fallen arrive, and all hell breaks loose.

The MYLAR® BLAST Blasts the Competition!

The Mylar® Sale of the Century

Order Now. Sale expires sooner than you think

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE?

OURS

1. Mylar outlasts Polyethylene and Polypropylene 100 to 1.
2. Decaying gases get through Mylar® 300 times slower than through the same thickness of Poly-bags.
3. The world's leading archival institutions require the use of Mylar® for preservation.
4. Mylar® has the strength and clarity to truly, physically protect and enhance the value of your collectibles.
5. Compared to others who sell Mylar®, we have more designs, sizes and best of all, we sell our products at a much lower price.

THEIRS

1. Poly-Bags are cheaper; say about 5¢ as compared to 20¢ for Mylar®.
2. One day in a Poly bag is the same as one year in a Mylar® bag as far as oxygen penetration.
3. Even the manufacturers of the Poly materials will not guarantee that their products are "archival safe".
4. Poly bags have 1% the strength of Mylar®, If you wait long enough they will turn yellow to brown.
5. Our competition spends more time & money attacking us in print than working to lower prices.

SUPERMAN EXPO

quite so fondly.

But for one glorious, sunny, June weekend in downtown Cleveland, Ohio, thousands of attendees enjoyed the Expo, tens of thousands of people lining the streets delighted in a great and memorable parade, and The Man of Steel's creators, Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster, were finally saluted by their hometown.

Superman never flew higher — or more proudly.

A CBG postscript: In a CBG editorial written following the event, Don and Maggie wrote:

We just returned this week from Cleveland where we had a deliriously wonderful time at the Superman Exposition, meeting new and old friends, running into former colleagues and former neighbors, and enjoying a few of the many attractions Cleveland has to offer.

One unusual aspect of this convention was that there was a parade in which all the guests participated. There were cars for notables such as SF writers Frederik Pohl, Jack Williamson, and Larry Niven. There were cars for Star Trek actors James Doohan and Majel Barrett. There were cars for noted comics writers George Pérez, Marv Wolfman, and Bill Mumy.

There was a car for noted writer Harlan Ellison, who had the long-overdue honor of being feted by his old hometown, with people lining the streets and rushing out to him with copies of his books to be autographed. (Not bad for a guy who ran away from the city when he was 13.)

There was a car for Jerry Ordway and Mike W. Barr but Mike somehow missed the bus to the start of the parade, so Mike Carlin was drafted to fill in for him, apparently under the theory that all Mikes are interchangeable.

And there was a big double-decker bus from London in which the rest of us rode. The bus bore a sign indicating it was filled with "DC Executives," but it would be a stretch to apply that to the writers (Roger Stern, Bill and Nadine Messner-Loebs), artists (Rick Stasi and Bill Messner-Loebs), editors (Mark Waid and the above-signed), and small children (whose names we did not catch) who were assigned to what was variously called by its passengers The Bus of Solitude and The Bus of Fools.

None of those on The Bus of Fools was foolish enough to think that the teeming multitudes of Cleveland would recognize any of us, but we all decided to make the most of it and waved cheerily to the crowd, smiling as broadly as we could, and doing everything within our power to overlook such facts as (a) we were acting like idiots and (b) the bus was not air-conditioned.

Still, we traveled down Euclid Avenue, smiling and waving, heading from East 18th Street to Public Square.

Along about East Sixth Street, we spotted CBG's ace filler writer Greg W. Myers in the crowd. Greg had Maggie's camera and was looking for a chance to photograph us in the parade for Krause Publications' house organ, The KP Chronicle. We opened a window and called out to him to come aboard the bus.

Parade vehicles proceed at a leisurely pace and Greg was able to catch up and board the bus with no apparent difficulty. He mounted the stairs to the upper deck and stood there, watching the passengers waving and smiling at the crowd.

His gaze traveled the length of the bus, watching Mark, Roger, Bill, Nadine, Rick, and your editors grinning and gesticulating at the crowd outside the windows.

Then he spoke.

"Are you people aware," he asked, "that these windows have tinted glass and that no one outside can see you?"

CBG* columnist Tony Isabella posed with a pair of admirers.

This letter is to say "thank you" to everyone at the Motor City Comic Con who took the time to look at my Dire Wolf preview mini-comic. I was able to hand out around 60 copies to people in the artist's, publisher's, and small-press areas of the con and I was amazed at how receptive and encouraging everyone was toward me.

Since Dire Wolf is my first attempt at breaking into comics, I had no idea what to expect when I arrived at Motor City. We've all heard the stories of artists treating their fans rudely and editors nearly reducing people to tears at shows. And, let's face it, asking a stranger for a favor is pretty awkward to begin with. As I arrived to hand out my ashcan, I was anticipating responses such as "not interested" or "I'll try to look at it" or maybe even "this is terrible!" I could not have been more wrong.

When I began asking people at the publishers' booths if I could give them a copy of the ashcan, one of the very first responses I received was an enthusiastic "Heck, yes!" and that's pretty much how the entire afternoon went. Everyone I talked to was happy to take a look at Dire Wolf, and most seemed genuinely interested in reading it. Nobody was rude to me, and many offered encouragement and wished me luck. (And when guys like Will Eisner and Sheldon Mold-off wish you luck, it goes a long way!)

And I discovered something else: When you hand stuff out in the small press area, you generally get handed something back. I ended up with a stack of mini-comics, comics, and literature absolutely free. Although I'm far from the bottom of the stack, my favorites so far are Amy Unbounded by Rachel Hartman and A Charmed Life, an autobiographical mini-comic by Pete Trudgeon. If you see either of these creators at a show, be sure to stop to see what they have to offer.

Although I was a little nervous going in, this year's Motor City Con was a very positive experience for me. My only regret is that I was only able to attend on Friday afternoon and not the whole weekend. Sincere thanks to everyone who took the time to talk to me and read my work. There are many of you whom I wish I had talked to longer. I would love to hear from anyone who read the Dire Wolf ashcan and has an opinion on it one way or the other.

[This week I received a query regarding a new self-publisher who was concerned about not being able to get a spot in the small-press area of the San Diego con and asking what could be done. My suggestions are ones you already took: Go to the show. Take your material along. Ask people to take a look. Begin networking. Almost everyone in this field is in it because of an affection for comics — which provides an advantage to a creator from the start.]

Did you know that the June-July issue of Civilization, a magazine published by the Library of Congress, is guest-edited by Jules Feiffer and focuses on comics? Feiffer contributes an autobiographical piece on the comic strips of his boyhood and a one-page interview with Robin Williams on his comics-related work.

There is also a tribute to Will Eisner by Kurt Vonnegut, a pull-out with a comics timeline on one side and a Little Nemo strip on the other, and a look at adventure strips, Archie, New Yorker cartoons, R. Crumb, and, as they say, much more. I don't claim to be a scholar of comics, but as a fan I found no glaring errors or omissions in this publication, other than wishing a couple of the articles had gone on longer! I just thought CBG readers would want to know about this.

Oh, So?

year's Motor City Con.

First, it was nice to finally meet in person some of the CBG crew, including you, Maggie, Brent, and John Diser (who is always great to work with when it comes to placing and scheduling ads). (Maggie, sorry that I couldn't catch the airport shuttle for you.)

Also, it was great to finally place faces to names of the people I have talked with on the phone or e-mailed so many times, including Tony Isabella, Kelley Jones, and Mike Pascale.

It was also nice to meet readers of Comic Book Profiles. I was flabbergasted when one young man told me that he had made up his mind to apply to the Joe Kubert School after reading our article on the school. He said that he is planning to start there in September, and I wish him the best of luck.

I also had a chance to meet Joel Thingvall and Robert Beerbohm, both of whom were quite helpful to us in obtaining artwork for that Joe Kubert issue. Thanks again, guys!

The main reason I wanted to write, however, was to mention a comic book that I was fortunate enough to get while I was there. The comic book is the first issue of Menthu, and it is written and drawn by Robert Roach. I was quite surprised by the book. It is about a man who discovers that he is the son of an ancient Egyptian god. The full-color art was quite good, and I found the story, while not perfect, quite entertaining. At $2.50 for 24 pages (remember, it is full color) this comic book is worth checking out. It can be ordered from Black Inc! Imprints, c/o Hometown Productions Inc., 3028 S. Washington St., Marion, IN 46953. You need to add 50¢ for postage and handling.

[You were more than helpful in the matter of the shuttle; no human could have done more — and I got to the airport in fine shape, thanks. (Especially compared to poor Brent and John, who had to drive to the show and back — about 24 hours total — in a Suburban without air conditioning.)]

The "Death of Gwen Stacy" issue of CBG brought back a lot of memories. I agree with the person who said that the loss of innocence of that particular event seems, in retrospect, to mark the end of an era. Time and the subsequent cheapening of the drama of death by its overuse and lack of finality in comic books of recent vintage has not dimmed my memories of how startled, saddened, and angry I felt in 1973.

I confess to surprise and puzzlement, however, over the controversy as to the fictional cause of Gwen's death. The contradictory dialogue of The Green Goblin made no sense to me then and still doesn't. Common sense and an old saying are enough: "It's not the fall that kills you; it's the sudden stop at the end." Gwen would have to have had a pretty weak heart to have died on the way down. (Just look at Bungie jumpers.) Her frail, all-too-human neck broke as a result of the sudden stop provided by Spider-Man's webbing.

The sound effect "snap" only provided further confirmation of what was obvious to me: that Peter had unintentionally helped to kill Gwen while trying desperately to save her: a moment of relieved triumph turned to tragedy. The response from the letters column in Amazing Spider-Man #125 uncovered by Troy Reynolds and cited in CBG #1284 provides further evidence of auctorial intent even if, as Maggie asserts, a work of art must ultimately speak for itself.

I believe that this one does. Despite the confusion caused by misleading dialogue, I have never doubted the tragic irony of this tale. (Nor have I ever forgiven Gerry Conway for killing a much-beloved character.)

Regarding Peter Dalpino's letter in CBG #1282, the comic book Walt Scott's Christmas Stories did, indeed, consist of reprints. Each story in the comic book is actually a compilation of a closed-end comic strip.

The NEA newspaper syndicate produced a special Christmas comic strip every year, apparently starting in the early 1940s (the earliest I've been able to document was 1942's Santa's Victory Christmas). It was its Christmas present to client newspapers. These comic strips typically ran for three weeks, ending on or around Christmas day. Walt Scott, who did the comic strip The Little People for NEA, was often called upon to produce the comic strip and did most if not all of them in the 1950s. Other creators who put their hand to the Christmas strips include Wally Wood (Bucky's Christmas Caper in 1967) and Jack Kent (Why Christmas Almost Wasn't in 1968). As far as I know, NEA still releases a special Christmas strip each year, though I understand they are often now reprints of earlier strips.

I have been able to document NEAs Christmas strips for the years 1942-43, 1949-53, 1955-62, 1966-71, and 1979-81. If anyone has information on other years, I would like to hear from them.

Open letter to the industry:

As a lifelong comics fan and small-press creator there are a few observations I would like to make.

It is unfortunate that, at a time when there is so much true talent producing such excellent material, readership continues to shrink and enthusiasm is at an all-time low. I don't claim to have the answers, but I can speak for myself.

To publishers: The multi-title families such of ongoing characters as Superman, Batman, and Spider-Man have driven me away from three of my favorite characters. The only title from any of these "families" I regularly supported was the Batman title drawn by Kelley Jones. I would love to read John Romita Jr.'s Spider-Man but not if I have to buy three other titles to stay in continuity. Please note that I will give Spidey another try when the comics are cut back this fall.

These days I follow creators, not characters. Even so, it ticks me off when creative teams change after six issues. Guess what? When a team I like goes, so do I. This short-run factor also weighs in when I consider purchasing a new series. Take Thor, for example. I like J.R. Jr. but I don't think he'll continue to pencil two comics for long (which is not a knock on him; I love his work). For this reason, I may balk at purchasing Thor. If I'm going to commit my time and money to a comic book for the long haul, I'd like the creators to do the same.

Oh, So?

I understand the economic factors involved in all this jumping around, but I'm tired of getting six months into a comic book and then having the rug pulled out from under me. These days, I'm looking for reasons not to buy comics. Thanks for helping me meet my budget.

To retailers: I understand you have to pay the rent, but I'm tired of having to climb over Beanie Babies and Magic players to get to the comics rack. And I apologize for interrupting your playing of the Internet Beanie market so I can give you my hard-earned money for comics. And tell me again why I bother to fill out the Previews order form and never see the comic books I ordered.

To creators: Hey, I know it's tough. I considered moving from small-press (digest-size photocopy comics) to the direct market — for about five minutes. Eventually I decided losing small amounts of money was preferable to losing large amounts of money.

All I can say is: Do your best work. Make your stories — and, therefore, your time — count. Sure, there are lots of great characters out there, but the monthly grind practically guarantees mediocrity. Devote yourselves to projects you believe in and make your statements through them. Only in this way will we make comics we can be proud of, comics that give us something beyond just a paycheck.

A few comments on CBG:

I may be in the minority on this, but I don't care for the theme issue, uh, theme. My reasoning is this: If I don't care for the issue's theme, then the whole issue is a wash for me.

Also, I have noticed Oh, So? seems to be suffering from shrinkage recently. Is this due to lack of letters, lack of interesting letters, or just editorial decision-making? Since this is my favorite portion of the publication, I am concerned. I look forward to the open forum Oh, So? provides and have been somewhat disappointed lately.

Finally, some things I'm looking forward to: Frank Miller's 300, Loeb and Sale's Superman, James Robinson's Starman and Leave It to Chance, Kurt Busiek's Astro City, Larsen's Savage Dragon, and SPX '98, which I will be attending in hopes of selling my own little funny books.

[Our editorial space comes, as it has always come, from filling in the puzzle pieces left by ad layouts. When we have smaller holes to fill, we flex where we can. We start each issue knowing we have certain items as a given. We have a cover, which takes a page. We have a contents page, which takes a page. We save the last editorial page for Peter David. And our readers have given us to understand that many of them subscribe for specific features which we do our very best to include.

When we start to put together an issue, we start with the given items and look for areas of flex. Sometimes, we have major problems. For example, Fred Hembeck has been sending us a steady supply of strips, but there have been weeks when we didn't have a full page free in which to fit 'em — and Fred's one of our favorites. (At some point, we'd like to bring you multiple pages of Fred. What would you think of that, eh?)

And Oh, So? is designed to flex — but it's one of our favorite departments, too. So, when we get the room, we run wild. When the issue is ready to be laid in, I always try to have 800 lines of letters ready to go. When we get the page layouts, we find out what has to be adjusted.

But we're already eagerly looking forward to CBG #1300 — which will (like our super-sized issue last year) allow us to cram in a bunch more cool stuff. Including lots and lots of letters.

By the way, the more folks who get CBG*, the bigger our issues can get. And the better the choices you'll have from the free classifieds. And the more you'll be able to sell neat stuff by mail. So tell your friends. Use the classifieds. And it wouldn't hurt our feelings, if you bought gift* CBG subs for your buddies.]

Re: Kevin Sheely's letter in CBG #1283.

Good luck, Kevin; the world can always use another well-run comics shop.

Since you have retail experience, I assume you are aware that there is no such thing as a perfectly run anything. Contrary to popular opinion, you cannot please even some of the people all of the time. We are all only human and as such can only do our best, and this precludes perfection.

While I try to do my best and spend 90 to 100 hours per week in my shop working at providing my customers with the best service I can, I know I'm going to make mistakes. I can try to rectify them when I make them but I can't not make them. I'm not perfect, and I don't expect I ever will be in this lifetime. I occasionally run across fellow human beings who cannot adjust to this fact and I try not to lose any sleep over it. I just continue to try and do my best and try to be content with the results.

Once again, good luck.

I enjoyed your comments on the misuse of the English language. I would like to offer my own pet peeve. Almost daily — on TV, on radio, or in person — I hear the word "nu-cu-lar," as in nucular war, nucular energy, nucular bombs, and so on. This comes from the mouths of congressmen, cabinet officials, journalists, and "regular folk" alike, and it makes me want to cut off the speaker's tongue. It's nuclear, nu-cle-ar, not nu-cu-lar.

Thank you very much. The tongue you save may be your own.

[Well, don't you find it sometimes comes in handy? It targets the speaker as someone whose opinion on nuclear facts is probably not to be accepted without further research (to put it mildly).]

Chaos times three! First, Miz Mishtal gets a drunk Fujisawa, to propose to her. Unfortunately Fujisawa gets cold feet and goes off on an extended backpacking trip - leaving Makoto to break the news to everyone else in the middle of the wedding ceremony! Then, princess Fatora impersonates Makoto attempting to seduce both Shayla Shayla and Nanami! Meanwhile, to make Makoto's life even more crazy, Jinnai has managed to find and awaken another goddess of destruction - Kalia. Unfortunately for everyone, Kalia does not follow anyone's orders, and truly desires to destroy everything in El Hazard!! Each volume contains at least one collectible, limited edition card (while supplies last, card set split between El Hazard 2 and the re-release of El Hazard 1). Don't miss out on these new adventures in The Magnificent World of El Hazard!

KEEP THINGS ANYTHING BUT QUIET

By Gary St. Lawrence

For two guys who were created as "forgettable characters," Jay and Silent Bob — the everyman alter egos of Bluntman and Chronic — have freight-trained their way out of the Oni Press "View Askewniverse," and taken a considerable chunk of the comics industry by storm. Their latest foray is a four-issue monthly mini-series by Kevin Smith and Duncan Fegredo starting this month.

From the movies to comics

Jay and Silent Bob, the pair of pot-head New Jerseyites begin their adventures in the self-titled mini-series by picking up exactly where they left off in Smith's counter-culture film Chasing Amy. Their travels throughout the four issues will bring the duo to where fans will see them in Dogma, Smith's latest film, which is currently in production. Each 32-page issue of the series will take Jay and Silent Bob into new directions and will answer questions that fans have been asking for years.

"It took us — the cast and Scott Mosier, the producer — several weeks of location scouting, rehearsals, and working on the storyboards for Dogma, before I could fully flesh out the story arc for this new mini-series," Smith said. "It's all there, now, and I'm excited to see what Duncan will do with my script. I love his stuff and it's a real trip to be working with him."

Oni Press' Shannon T. Stewart said that the decision to do the mini-series was pushed along by an industry review of Clerks. "Someone wrote an article that erroneously announced that there was, at one time, going to be a full-color Bluntman and Chronic comic book," Stewart said. "Nobody knows where that story came from, although, at the time, we were considering a project like this: just Jay and Silent Bob, not Bluntman and Chronic.

"I'm sure the fans probably liked the idea after seeing Chasing Amy, but it just wasn't the case. The real story behind the mini-series is that Kevin had been talking about several projects with us for a while. He and Bob Schreck had pitched some ideas to Dark Horse, but they never went anywhere. Then, when Oni Press was founded, Kevin's ideas started becoming reality. Jay and Silent Bob was the first project Kevin and Oni Press wanted to pursue.

"People responded really well to the first J&SB feature by Matt Wagner, which sort of established Jay and Silent Bob as the R2-D2 and C-3PO of Kevin's mythologies. They pop up everywhere in the View Askewniverse. As such, it just made sense for them to get their own series."

Smith's storytelling

Stewart added that part of Jay and Silent Bob's appeal is Smith's talent for storytelling and developing his characters and their relationships. "The reason Kevin gets tapped for so many stories and in so many mediums is his storytelling — especially his characters' dialogue. And let's not forget the humor. The fans avidly follow all the in-jokes that Kevin peppers throughout the various projects. There's an amazing cohesiveness to Kevin's scripts, so much so that the fans have started referring to Chasing Amy, Mallrats, and Clerks as The Trilogy. This mini-series is the perfect bridge to explain these characters and all the events in the three movies."

Smith agreed. "Writing comics is much harder than writing for film. In fact, comics are the hardest thing I've ever written," he said. "The first draft of the Clerks comic book read very much like a film script and had to be seriously reworked so the final version would really read like a comics script. But that's the beauty of writing Jay and Bob: There is no 'realistic' template to follow when it comes to the characters and what they do. These guys pivot between the reality-based movies like Clerks and Chasing Amy and the more fantasy-driven projects like Dogma and the 'Walt Flanagan's Dog' project I did for Oni Double Feature. Nobody challenges the continuity.

"In the timeline of the movies, Mallrats takes place the day before Clerks. Go back and watch the flicks in that order and you'll find two very different portrayals of Jay and Bob. Then watch them in Chasing Amy. Even that portrayal is different from the two previous movies."

Still, Smith is sort of surprised over the success of Jay and Silent Bob. "I had no clue that these characters would attain this kind of popularity. I remember reading

Although the black-and-white panels on these three pages — taken from the upcoming Jay & Silent Bob #1 — have no words, the rest of the issue is rife with them, but, since CBG is a family publication, they couldn't be presented here.

"Bob's become far more expressive than he was in Clerks."

all the theatrical reviews of Clerks and finding maybe two that mentioned Jay and Silent Bob at all (with the exception of the ones that listed me as the director playing Silent Bob). I assumed they were forgettable characters. But I still wanted to put Jason Mewes in movies, so I wrote Jay and Bob into Mallrats, as well."

San Diego screening

Smith said it wasn't until the '95 San Diego Comic-Con that he grasped how popular the characters had became. "We'd decided to screen an early cut of the film without any credits at Comic-Con. The audience was packed with comics fans and pros alike. When Jay and Bob first came on the screen, the audience exploded — applauding, screaming — they were really blown away by them.

"At first, I was taken aback. But then I realized that Clerks had gone to video by that point and was finding a whole new audience that hadn't seen it in the art-house theaters during its theatrical run. A good chunk of that audience not only watched the movie on tape, but watched it repeatedly — religiously, even. They loved the movie — especially Jay and Bob.

"Do I understand it? To a degree — I can watch and listen to Jason Mewes for hours. Is it flattering? Of course! Not a day goes by, no matter what part of the country I'm in, that someone doesn't say, 'You're Silent Bob!' And I still get a kick out of that.

"I'm ecstatic about how well our comic books are doing, especially when you consider how jaded the marketplace has become. All this praise and frenzy is coming at me, Matt Wagner, Jim Mahfood, and Oni Press. It's nice, but it throws me a little off sometimes. I mean, I'm having the time of my life doing something I've always wanted to do and I'm actually being thanked to do it — and paid to do it! All I can do is thank people back, for their support and kind words. But I still feel a little guilty, afterward. You know, everybody's life should be this tough."

But he indicated that that same recognition was frustrating for him as a writer. He said that, although he's thrilled that the fans have come to love the characters so much, there are other aspects to his work that are being overlooked. "You break your back designing the intricately layered dialogue of all the other characters," he said, "and half the people I run into tell me that their favorite part in all the movies is when Jay and Bob danced in Clerks. There's more to all of this than just that."

The evolution of characters

Smith said that the characters have also evolved considerably since their debut, only some of which has been intentional. "Bob's become far more expressive than he was in Clerks. Back then, he was just a guy who stood around Jay. Now, he reacts to and complements Jay with non-verbal dialogue. Whether on-screen or on the comics page, Silent Bob uses his eyes to say more than Jay ever does. That's something you never saw much of in his first appearance. Jay, on the other hand, is becoming more self-aware, whether in Amy — when he editorializes on 'Snootchie Bootchies' in the diner scene — or in Dogma. I'm now writing the character to be conscious of the fact that he is what he is: a man-child who really isn't all there."

In the mini-series, Jay and Bob break some molds that were cast upon them through their evolution. In the first issue, the guys actually leave New Jersey and go on a road trip. Where to and why is a keen secret in the Oni house, just as why Jay and Bob are on the set of a pornographic movie in the second issue. But the real task, Smith said, was finding a way to work in the orangutan from the end of Mallrats as the whole plot of the third issue, which Stewart said will finally answer the fan question of "Why?"

"At the end of Mallrats, you see the guys walking away, and, suddenly, there's this orangutan walking with them," Stewart said. "No explanation. No rational reason for her being there. But there she is. The third issue tells the whole story of that orangutan (whose name is Suzanne, by the way), including how she ended up in the closing Mallrats sequence."

Issue #1 of Jay and Silent Bob will sport two different covers. The first is illustrated by two other counter-culture icons, Joe Quesada and Jimmy Palmiotti — whose work adorned all the mock-up comics and magazines, as well as the actual Bluntman and Chronic comic books seen in Chasing Amy. The second cover shows a photograph of Smith and Jason Mewes in-character and in-costume. Stewart said that the twin covers aren't a sales gimmick but, rather, a chance for fans to get a couple of different takes on the art approach to the series.

"We're not making this so you have to buy one if you buy the other, and there's no imbalance in how many of each one we're shipping to stores," Stewart said. "If a store orders 100 copies of the book, they'll receive 50 copies of each cover variant."

Quesada said that there wasn't a second's hesitation between Smith's asking for their work on the first-issue cover and both his and Palmiotti's enthusiastic

"full-on thumbs up."

Issue #2's cover was drawn by Mike Allred. The third issue will also have two covers: one by series illustrator Duncan Fegredo, and the other by Jamie Hernandez. The fourth cover is a full-color painting by Fegredo.

When asked about his involvement with the project, Fegredo commented, "It was a very happy end to what could have been a very bad week, indeed! I had just discovered that a project for another publisher which I was assured was 'in the bag,' suddenly was 'out of the bag.' After a few days and a couple of phone calls, I was speaking with Bob Schreck and being offered Jay and Silent Bob. I was looking for a chance to work on a project that would be a real departure from most of my previous comics work. That's something I had made a concerted effort to achieve, and this Jay and Silent Bob mini-series certainly qualifies as just that."

'Clerks': The continued printings

The furor over Smith's progressive success is having a retroactive effect on his previous works, as fan-demand and retailer orders demanded a second printing of Clerks, despite what Oni Publisher Joe Nozemack called "an aggressive amount of overstock" on the first run. That demand hasn't eased off.

As of mid-May, Clerks went into a third printing, and, in early June, Schreck said the issue will have a fourth printing in July.

"It just wasn't enough for the incredible demand that we're seeing," Nozemack said. "Stores are selling out of their initial orders within hours of its arrival. The same way that Kevin has turned independent cinema circles upside-down with his movies, he's got both of his comic-book projects flying from the shelves."

Each subsequent print run of Clerks has a different color scheme on Gilbert Hernandez' cover art that features the Smith characters, Dante and Randall, in order to make it easily distinguishable from the first printing.

Now, with the release of Jay and Silent Bob, which will hit store shelves July 1 (with no price difference between the two cover variants), Smith's excitement level is building.

"I'm loving this," Smith said, "being able to play with Jay's and Bob's development from project to project, while not alienating the audience's recognition factor. No matter what nuances are added or taken away from these guys, they'll just always be a couple of stoners who hang around outside the convenience store. And don't we all have that archetype somewhere in our lives?"

Kevin Smith: His take on himself

By Gary St. Lawrence

In just a few short years, Kevin Smith has attained a near-revered status in the comics and multimedia industries. Yet the press coverage to date mentions nothing about Smith's self-perception along these lines, and there have been no reports of his having an ego (at least, not a large one). Amid all the fandom and celebrity, you may wonder how Smith views himself and what he considers his "standing" in the comics community to be. Is Kevin Smith comfortable with eventually attaining "legend" status in comics?

"I've got very little ego to begin with," Smith said from the set of Dogma. "So the kind words and the embrace from some people within the comics community has translated to nothing more than a feeling of contentment. And, while I appreciate the current credibility, it's also based mostly on another medium: the movies. Aside from the Oni Press projects, which are based on characters and material from my day job, I don't think I've really proven myself yet within the comics community. Whether my Daredevil stint is regarded highly or it's seen as little more than self-indulgent, I'll still continue to be quite happy plugging the art form every chance I get."

As a result of his sudden celebrity, Smith has had to spread his schedule thin to accommodate the deluge of multi-media interview requests he receives.

In the next six months alone, you'll be seeing Smith interviews in magazines including Premiere, Spin, and Playboy, as well as MTV's regular and frequent broadcasts of the "Jay and Silent Bob" short features.

Smith said that fan opinion and input play a guarded part in his decisions to accept, initiate, or decline a project. "I take both the praise and criticism with a grain of salt," Smith said. "Nothing's for everyone. So for as many people who like what I do, there are always going to be far more who think I suck and attribute my success more to luck than talent — a point I can't really argue with sometimes.

"Thanks to our website (www.viewaskew.com), I've been able to get direct feedback from fans and detractors alike over the last two years. I've found it incredibly beneficial in guiding me along the creative path. They let you know what stories they want to hear. I think we all swim in the same pond. I'm them, and they're me. We're all fanboy geeks at heart, and I just happen to be the one with a platform from which to tell the stories or depict the characters they see themselves reflected in."

In the case of the Jay and Silent Bob mini-series, fan response prompted him to dedicate an entire issue to Susanne the orangutan (from the closing credits of Mallrats). Smith said the issue responds to droves of repeated inquiries as to why he arbitrarily added an ape to the end of the film and what significance Susanne has in "View Askewniverse" continuity.

"I guess, in the end," Smith said, "I just try to satisfy two people: myself and my friend Walter Flanagan, who reintroduced me to the comic-book medium nine years ago with a copy of Frank Miller's Batman: The Dark Knight. If he hadn't shoved that into my mitts, I doubt I'd have ever rediscovered the sheer joy of graphic storytelling. But I do take the 'Because you demanded it ...' aspect of comics and fandom very seriously."

Smith has been identified as a Silver Age revivalist, partially due to the characters he's said he'd like to work on, including Green Arrow, Superman, and Daredevil. But he maintains that they're just characters he's always loved and has always wanted to write.

"My comics coming-of-age was in the 'Dark Ages' — from Batman: The Dark Knight, forward. My shot at Superman was just serendipitous, really," he explained. "While I'm not the biggest Man of Steel fan on the planet, I do have great respect for the character and its history — reverence, even. With Green Arrow and Daredevil, they're just characters I've loved because of the fashion in which they were handled by other creators. Frank Miller's run on Daredevil was nothing short of amazing and groundbreaking, and it made a Matt Murdock fan out of me. Mike Grell's Green Arrow: The Longbow Hunters and the subsequent series that followed was one of the series I read when I got back into comics, and I was floored by it. It was proof that there was no such thing as a bad character, so long as said character was being handled by a good writer or writer-artist."

Given Smith's anchoring between film and comics, he indicated he has decisive ideas about what is wrong with current comic-book-based movies and television shows and is intent on not duplicating the mistakes.

"This idea that the comic-book movies today have to be made more palatable doesn't make sense," he said. "I understand that you can't jam 10, 20, or 30 years of continuity down the throat of someone who doesn't know that Alfred Pennyworth once gave up his theatrical ambitions to be Bruce Wayne's butler. But what's wrong with at least respecting the audience's intelligence enough to present the character the way it's presented in comics currently? I think there are very few folks left in the land of the quick who fail to realize that comics 'aren't just for kids anymore.' If you've been breathing for the last 10 years in our culture, you have to have at least a passing familiarity with something comics-related — at least enough to know that the days of 'Holy Giant Cakes, Batman!' are long gone in the Batman mythos. By virtue of that, don't immediately assume John Q. Average Non-Comics-Buyer will be disappointed or feel alienated, if a comic-book character is portrayed in the same fashion it is on the screen as it is on the page."

The obvious question is, "What is Kevin Smith going to work on next?" Apparently, the same mastery of scripting lends itself well to dropping bait in the shark-infested fan pool.

"Jaws are going to drop when folks catch wind of some of the things I've got in the pipeline," he said teasingly. "I know mine did when I first heard about them!"

PLANET RACERS

BOOK TWO:

"Off-Season"

After putting their privateer team into third place in the Planet Racing Series of 2999, Godman Falcon and Methania Fitts have to get ready for the big one -- the Tri-Millenial race series.

But getting it all together in the "off-season" is easier said than done. On top of scrambling to put together a viable race bike for the upcoming race season, Godman and Methania have to contend with tribal prejudices, family crises, and a vengeful female assassin...

...not to mention p'teka bugs!

"A River in Egypt"

By Maggie Thompson

Oni Press has been a focus of much discussion in recent months, thanks in large part to the popularity of Kevin Smith's Jay and Silent Bob, featured in Clerks and the first issue of Oni Double Feature (drawn in the latter by Matt Wagner). That's not to say the canny editing of co-publisher Bob Schreck has had nothing to do with public reception of the stylish line — a line which is geared to adult connoisseurs of comics.

St. Swithin's Day

And Smith's characters maintain the same ambiance they had in Smith's films. Added to their commentaries are those of other characters who reflect on the ins and outs of comics and toys and clerks and the consumers who come in contact with them. So there are inside jokes aplenty to accompany the slapstick antics of the pair and those around them — delectably drawn — helping to produce a hot cult item. "I immersed myself in the toy game. You won't believe the things I've learned." Learn with them; it's a hoot. With a message, for those who are willing to pay attention.

St. Swithin's Day, on the other hand, needs no in-group knowledge. It's aimed at an adult audience, but the reader doesn't need to know comics to be moved — and disturbed — by the gripping story of a teen determined to assassinate a public figure. Morrison convincingly plunges into the mind and motivations of such a person, and the results — supported by Grist's spare art — are compelling.

Oni Double Feature has more to offer than Jay and Silent Bob, and readers will find a mix of material which offer varied attractions. Creators include Paul Pope, Arnold and Jacob Pander, Troy Nixey, and Bill Sienkiewicz (with one-pagers by other popular contributors). Of the lot, Sienkiewicz' science-fictional noir mystery "A River in Egypt" is the most fascinating, involving a conversing cat, a false arm that doubles as a gun, dreams, and bullets.

Clerks: The Comic Book #1 (Feb 98, $2.95) writer Kevin Smith; artist Jim Mahfood. Oni Double Feature #1 (Mar 98, 2nd print), #2 (Feb 98), #3 (Mar 98), #4 (Apr 98)($2.95 @) various creators. St. Swithin's Day (Mar 98, $2.95) writer Grant Morrison; artist Paul Grist.

I wish Reg Smythe (creator of Andy Capp), dead at 80, had gone out on a higher note. I've been a loyal Capp fan for more than 30 years, but, according to stats compiled by Jeffrey Lindenblatt (editor of The Missing Years from Spec Productions) the strip has lost 14 "Top 100" newspaper clients in the past four years. Ostensibly, this is because the strip is "old" (I'm glad none of the editors or readers are) and politically incorrect. I know that my wife, for one, isn't enamored of Capp (although my uncle can get her to laugh at a Capp joke); but it's really unfair that any sort of age, gender, or morality gap exists. Funny is funny, doggone it.

I'm sorry if Andy Capp presents such a tantalizing role model. I can scarcely finish typing this column, so great is my desire to flirt with an insolent tavern strumpet, clean up after pigeons, antagonize a soccer hooligan, and chip my teeth flopping onto the sidewalk.

No, I wouldn't bring Andy home for supper and I know his wife Flo is an enabler, but what other strips are to be yanked at such an alarming clip?

Marmaduke fathered a litter of "illegitimate" pups. Catbert demonizes felines. Cathy is demeaning to women. Shoe smokes cigars. Dagwood eats at a "greasy spoon" and allows capitalist pig J.C. Dithers to bully him. Doonesbury has something to rile everyone. (Has Snuffy Smith saved himself by giving up moonshining? Is Blondie's job good enough? Will the cleaning up of Gen. Halftrack save Beetle Bailey? I'm sincerely concerned about the answers.)

Reg Smythe brought me a lot of pleasure over the years, as when I received an "A" in senior English for reporting on a Capp paperback (to be sure, my own audacity had something to do with it) or when my younger brother (who spent his teen years obsessed with being different from me) moaned and groaned about the alleged incomprehensibility of the working-class English dialect. How many of us could concoct 40-plus years of jokes about a layabout whose avoidance of gainful employment can best be summarized as "He's the kind of bloke who can take all the stumblin' blocks and build 'em into a flippin' barricade"?

To paraphrase one of the paperback titles, "Hats off to you, Reg Smythe."

Viz collects 'manga for grownups' in fall

Viz Comics started its Pulp anthology magazine in December 1997 to explore the variety of manga published for a general adult audience in Japan. This is a segment of the Japanese comics market which has been almost completely ignored in the United States until now. Science fiction, horror, and fantasy tales for varying age groups, still dominate the manga available here.

The first issue of Pulp introduced American readers to the crime comic book Banana Fish, the surreal action of Black & White, the sick and twisted humor of Heartbroken Angels, the suspense story Strain, and Dance till Tomorrow, an erotic comedy. Pulp Vol. 2 #6, released in June, introduced a new suspense story, Voyeur. In September, Viz plans to launch its Pulp graphic novel line, collecting the most popular features serialized in Pulp.

The first volumes of Strain, Dance till Tomorrow, and Banana Fish are scheduled for September release. Black & White Vol. 1 will follow in October, with more titles to follow.

Banana Fish Vol. 1 by Akimi Yoshida, 192 pages, $15.95. Collects the first seven installments from Viz' Pulp magazine.

In 1973, an American soldier in Vietnam goes mad and guns down his companions. Since then, the only words he has ever said are "Banana Fish." In 1985, charismatic New York City gang leader Ash Lynx is given a strange drug and an address by a dying man. As Ash begins to investigate, he draws the unwanted interest of Mafia boss Papa Dino, and a series of puzzling suicides tears apart New York's crime community.

Dance till Tomorrow Vol. 1 by Naoki Yamamoto, 216 pages, $15.95. Collects the first 12 installments from Viz' Pulp magazine.

College student Suekichi Terayama has a problem: He's inherited $4.5 million. According to his great-grandfather's will, he's got to graduate to get the money, and sexy Aya Hibino isn't helping him concentrate on his studies. Anyway, Suekichi prefers his work as the producer of an avant-garde theater troupe to studying — perhaps because he has a big crush on the troupe's leader, Shimomura. At the same time, Suekichi finds it hard to resist Aya's charms, even though he suspects she's only in love with his money.

Strain Vol. 1 by Buronson and Ryoichi Ikegami, 224 pages, $16.95. Collects the first eight installments of Strain from Viz' Pulp magazine.

Life is cheap in the back streets of Malaysia's Kuala Lumpur — assassin Mayo will kill anyone for just $5. But when the local crime syndicate — the "Organization" — hires him to kill a teen-age prostitute and her mother, Mayo succumbs to pity, instead. His defiance earns him a death sentence from the Organization.

Black & White Vol. 1 by Taiyo Matsumoto, 216 pages, $15.95. Collects the first 11 installments from Viz' Pulp magazine.

A story of mean kids on mean, surreal streets. Orphaned in the back alleys of Treasure Town, Black and White must steal, mug, and fight to survive. Black is stronger than he looks and always quick to avenge any slight to his guileless friend White. Both are quick to defend their territory from rival gangs, costumed freaks, mimes, and other criminals.

Viz has offerings for general audiences, too

Viz will add titles aimed at a more general audience later this year. Animerica Extra is scheduled to begin in October, with Pokémon (pocket monsters) starting a month later.

Animerica Extra will be a new monthly anthology designed for anime fans. Covering a variety of genres, Animeria Extra will include science fiction, fantasy, comedy, action, and shôjo (girls') manga — but each story is based on, or is the basis for, a popular anime release. Each issue will contain 128 black-and-white pages for $4.95. The first issue, scheduled for October release, begins four manga stories:

• Fushigi Yûgi by Yû Watase. When schoolgirls Miaka and Yui open an ancient Chinese book, they are transported to the magical and dangerous World of the Four Gods.

• Video Girl Ai by Masakazu Katsura. Yôta loves Moemi. Moemi loves Takashi. And Takashi, Yôta's best friend, isn't in love with anyone. But the love triangle gets an extra angle when shy Yôta finds a strange video store and rents a tape labeled Video Girl Ai, which, when played, summons a real girl.

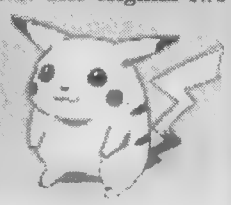
• X/1999 by Clamp. Tokyo teen-ager Kamui finds he can't escape his destiny as the world's most powerful psychic. The Seven Harbingers and the Seven Seals, opposed groups of powerful psychics, both want his help to save — or destroy — the Earth. The associated anime feature, X, is scheduled to see theatrical release in the United States in the fall from Manga Entertainment.

• Steam Detectives by Kia Asamiya. In a gothic, steam-powered city infested with sentient machines, masked criminals, and super-villains, boy detective Narutaki's latest case involves an aristocratic young woman who is possessed. But the sinister Lady Margarita is determined to perform the exorcism herself.

Most Americans had an unfortunate introduction to Pokémon, when an episode of the popular Japanese childrens' series that used multiple strobe effects in one scene aired in early December and caused seizures in more than 600 children. The show was pulled off the air from December through March but is now stronger than ever in Japan, with two movies scheduled for release this summer.

Despite the unpromsing introduction, the TV show (minus the problematic special effects) and its inspiration, the Game Boy games, are due for release in America in September. Pokémon also inspired a teen-oriented manga version, which Viz plans to release starting in November. In addition, Viz and Pioneer will begin to release Pokémon on home video the same month.

The Pokémon game allows the player to find monsters, which can be personalized and taught special moves, in a role-playing style game. Two players can connect their Game Boys and trade or fight their Pocket Monsters. The original two games contained 150 monsters. Monster #25, the "electric hamster" Pikachu, is the star of the 40-episode TV series.



The Cat. If you say "The Mouse," chances are most folks will determine immediately if not sooner that you're referring to Walt Disney's renowned rodent. True. Well, before The Mouse came The Cat.

In the 1920s, before Uncle Walt dreamed up Mickey, the animal whose animated on-screen antics captivated the Jazz Age audience was Felix the Cat.

Felix was the brainchild of Otto Messmer, but the only byline associated with The Cat for almost its entire history was that of Pat Sullivan. It was another refrain in that old familiar chorus in cartoonery: The creator's identity is submerged in the entrepreneur's enterprise, and the creator is robbed not only of wealth but fame. It happened to Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster with Superman. It (the fortune deprivation, anyhow) happened to Jack Kirby and Joe Simon with Captain America. And it happened to Otto Messmer with Felix.

This kind of robbery was common in the animation industry in the early years. The same thing happened to Ub Iwerks; Iwerks, not Walt Disney, invented Mickey Mouse. Just as Disney was always the only one credited with producing his cartoons, so were Walter Lantz and Paul Terry. That was the animation business. And Felix was a child of the animation industry.

Pat Sullivan was an Australian who made his way to America by way of England in the early years of this century. Here, beginning in about 1911, he assisted William Marriner on and off in producing the Sunday page Sambo and His Funny Noises, a newspaper comic strip that featured a grotesque caricature of a little black kid — minuscule body, giant "8-ball" head (a black ball that gleamed) with pink lips at the bottom and a tiny derby on top.

In the spring of 1915, Sullivan joined the Raoul Barre animation studio and learned animation (although not, according to John Canemaker, very well). Later that year, he started his own studio, pirating Sambo with a film adaptation dubbed Sammy Johnsin, the first reels of which were released that fall.

Otto Messmer, a kid from New Jersey who had sold a few cartoons to Judge and Life and other humor magazine outlets, went to work in Sullivan's studio in early 1916. And in November 1919, Felix made his celluloid debut in a film called Feline Follies, a 10-second extravaganza. In this first incarnation, he was called "Mister Tom" and, with that moniker, he made another appearance in Musical Mews. But in a December release called The Adventures of Felix, The Cat acquired the name he'd become famous with.

Canemaker, whose 1991 book Felix: The Twisted Tale of the World's Most Famous Cat traces the life and work of both Messmer and Sullivan, is unequivocal in crediting Messmer with the creation of The Cat. I haven't studied the matter as he has but, based upon a single trait in Messmer's sense of humor, I agree.

Messmer's sense of humor was peculiarly visual — the kind of visualizing animation is so suited for. Metamorphosis is one of the manifestations of this creative quirk. In that first 10-second film, The Cat hears a female "meow," and his tail detaches to form a question mark. Later, he uses his tail as a toothbrush and, later still, as a baseboard for a scooter. He also uses his tail as a fishhook. Sight gags like these were a Messmer speciality.

And we find such gags in abundance in the animated cartoons and in the newspaper Felix strip that began in 1923, first as a stat-instance. Similarly, wormy-looking paint squeezed from a tube is made into a real earth worm. A cloverleaf is converted to a propeller because it looks like a propeller. Puffs of smoke become a bouquet.

Messmer's Felix often got out of fixes by using everyday objects, not his bag of tricks, in new ways.

None of these maneuvers are reality-based. It is the appearance of something, its resemblance to something else, that governs the metamorphosis.

Adapting his visual sense to the newspaper-strip medium, Messmer frequently employs the speech balloon as a prop. Once, he converts it to a lasso that Felix uses to get himself out of a scrape; another time, the speech balloon becomes a hot air balloon that Felix rides out of his current predicament.

Apart from revealing Messmer's distinctive comedic touch, the Fantagraphics book is a treat because of Messmer's graphic style alone. By 1928, as the samples herein vividly demonstrate, Messmer was producing fanciful pictures that evoke memories of Cliff Sterrett's surrealistic Polly and Her Pals and even of George Herriman's immortal Krazy Kat: decorative patterning of colors and shapes, with Felix' blackness a highly contrasting element; backgrounds that shift and change shape before our eyes, panel to panel.

As early as 1924, Messmer's line has a languid, juicy quality, and Felix is starting to look cuter and cuter. Initially, the design of The Cat was simplicity itself: solid black circles and spindly, pipecleaner legs. Creatures designed like this were easy to animate: black solids presented no problems in linear continuity from one cel to the next. Mickey Mouse and even Oswald the Rabbit (at first) partook of the same devices (as, it should be noted, did Sammy Johnsin).

The evolution of The Cat through his newspaper incarnation is well documented here: The book offers a sampling of strips from 1923 through 1928. In his earliest appearances, Felix sometimes looks as fierce (even vicious) as a real cat. As time passes, though, his eyes get larger and rounder, occupying more and more of his face; his sharp teeth show less frequently; and his head gets larger with respect to his body, a visual tactic that invariably makes the character more cuddly.

The strips are mostly Sundays (among them, eight consecutive months in 1928), and the colors are superb: bright and cheery without being at all garish. Great stuff. But Gerstein gives us a few weeks' worth of dailies, too, so, all told, we have an ample display of Messmer's graphic genius. Some of the gags are pretty lame, truth to tell, but the ingenuity of Messmer's visual imagination is fascinating to witness.

Fantagraphics also offers a couple of videotape volumes of Messmer's on-screen skill ($29.95 each for 64 minutes). And, if you want to complete your education in things Felix, you can get the Canemaker book, too — from Bud Plant at $19.95.

A Glimpse of Divinity? I finally got around to reading The Superman/Madman Hullabaloo in all three parts. In rendering the iconographic super-hero, Mike Allred gratifyingly evokes Joe Shuster's graphic vision, it seems to me, but with a bolder, more confident outline. The dilemma that brings these two unlikely protagonists together results from an encounter in some Other Dimensional venue where Superman is divorced from his powers (again), which are thereupon scattered hither and yon among Frank Einstein (aka Madman) and four other citizens of Snap City. The story is a little less disjointed than the usual Madman fantasy — that is, a little less mad, I suppose you could say — but that's not to denigrate the customary Allred weirdness. After all, we expect precisely that sort of off-beat narrative in this series.

Incidentally, in Madman Comics #11, Allred offers a theory of creation that seems rooted somehow in a notion of universal harmony, the music of the spheres, mayhap. And in #2 of the Hullabaloo, Frank, probably in the same mood, asks Superman if he's a god. Superman says he's not ("I'm very much just a man," he says. Hey, can we believe this?), but Allred has created a profoundly reflective moment in the otherwise madcap antics of his comic-book adventure story, and it reminds me of something Malcolm Muggeridge said.

Muggeridge, onetime editor of England's humor weekly Punch and a sort of gadfly for all seasons, was once interviewed by John Mortimer (creator of Rumpole of the Bailey). By this time, Muggeridge had become seriously religious and, when Mortimer asked him how he could justify or explain a God who permitted the extermination camps of World War II and other such horrors, Muggeridge said: "God seems to me to be an artist rather than a judge. He has created the drama, and the parts of the play that are wicked and dreadful may be necessary to the whole creation in a way we can't understand. Life is a drama and not a progress." In its imperfections, Mortimer observed, the notion of life as a drama is also more entertaining than it would be if it took place in a perfect world.

Stay 'tooned.

Concrete: Killer Smile

The most popular of all Concrete series, this high-octane thriller garnered Eisner nominations and critical praise. Readers who eagerly devoured Strange Armor will find this the ideal Concrete dessert. 120 page softcover. $16.95

"If Killer Smile doesn't make your knuckles turn white, check your pulse. Maybe you're dead. This is edge-of-your-seat suspense..." -- Frank Miller

Your retailer can order this and all of the Concrete backlist, or order direct from Dark Horse: (800) 862-0052 • 8-5 Pacific time

Printing your independent comic books or magazines isn't a problem when you know the right people.

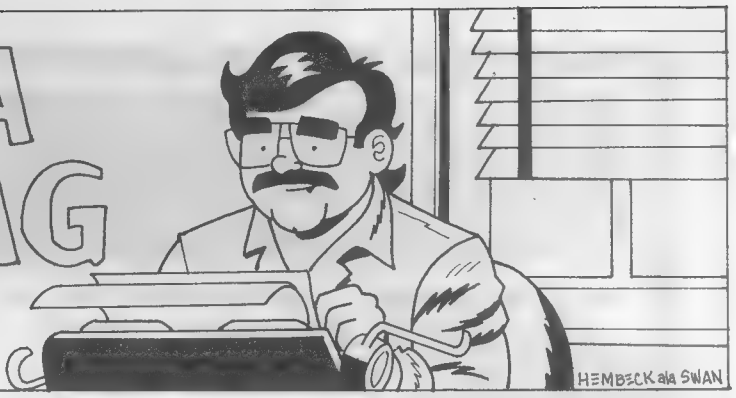
MEDINA MAILBAG



"I have made this [letter] longer than usual, only because I have not had the time to make it shorter."

— Blaise Pascal (1657)

Hmm, what comic books would comic-strip characters read?

Prince Valiant probably likes to kick back and read Charles Vess' Ballads and Sagas with Aleta. When he's off adventuring, he likely carries a few issues of Captain America. After all, Cap is a kindred knight in shining armor.

Snoopy undoubtedly keeps tabs on Hans von Hammer, The Enemy Ace, in Our Army at War and Star Spangled War Stories. To prep for his frequent court appearances, Charlie Brown's legal beagle reads those 1950s Mr. District Attorney comics.

Opus the Penguin, who can't resist powerful women, relaxes in the dandelions with Wonder Woman and The Sensational She-Hulk. Bill the Cat doesn't read comics so much as he regurgitates them. Lately, he's been regurgitating X-Men crossovers as fast as Marvel can turn them out.

Gary Larson's amoeba character from The Far Side stretches out with Jack Cole's Plastic Man. He (she? it?) also unwinds with any DC comic book with a gorilla cover.

Bill Watterson's Calvin is hooked on The Savage Dragon; it's better than Chocolate-Frosted Sugar Bombs. He also digs those rampaging Jack Kirby monsters from Strange Tales and other pre-hero Marvel titles. Hobbes, meanwhile, is a regular reader of Ka-Zar, another story of a boy and his cat. Hobbes also can't get enough of The Power of Shazam! — especially when Mr. Tawky Tawny appears in an issue.

Hagar the Horrible recently bought a run of early issues of The Brave and the Bold for the Viking Prince stories.

Grimmy of Mother Goose and Grimm reads Tales From the Crypt and other E.C. horror titles — although he sleeps with the lights on when he's finished. Hope this helps.

Ripley Paul, Allentown, Pa.

(Thanks for playing our game, Ripley. I have to admit I got a kick seeing you mention both Mr. District Attorney and The Savage Dragon in your letter. Between them, the titles span about 50 years of comic-book publishing.)

———

In a recent CBG column, you brought up the subject of comic-book characters and the comics they read. I recall that Green Arrow was a fan of Peanuts in the Green Lantern/Green Arrow series. And, going by a panel that I saw on a website and which came from a relatively recent Superman comic book, either Clark or Lois — or maybe both — are fans of Ranma 1/2.

As for my guessing which comic-book series would be read by various characters:

Ranma Saotome reads Archie titles and wishes he only had two girlfriends with which to contend.

Hiram Lodge, Veronica's father, collects Uncle Scrooge.

J'onn J'onzz reads a little bit of everything, from Judge Dredd to The Savage Dragon to Neon Genesis Evangelion.

Billy Batson reads Dragonball and Dragonball Z.

Hank Pym reads Sandman Mystery Theatre.

Hurricane Heeran,
Encino, Calif.

(Here's a challenge to any television — and movie — writers who are CBG and comic-book readers. How about writing scenes where your characters are reading comic books or in which they, at least, make it obvious they read or have read comic books? There were frequent Superman references in Seinfeld; and Steve Kriozere had a reference to Fantastic Four #36 — the first appearance of The Frightful Four — in the series finale of Team Knight Rider. I would love to see more of this in the hope it would increase awareness of comic books and convey the fact that some very cool people read and enjoy them.)

———

I read your columns (both in CBG and online) and Peter David's But I Digress and just noticed something weird.

You and your children liked the new Godzilla movie. Peter David and his daughters didn't.

You don't watch Seinfeld. He does. At least, that's what I assume, given he wrote a column — "Seinfeld, P.I." — with various in-jokes from the show.

You call yourself "America's most-beloved comic-book writer and columnist." Peter calls himself "a writer of stuff."

There are other weird opposites, but they're not coming to me now. Didn't you once claim, as a joke, that you were Peter David's evil twin? Or vice versa? Just wondering.

Andrew Van (via e-mail)

(I can't believe I haven't told this story here. OK, the "evil twin" stuff stems from the early months of this column, when I was getting way too much mileage out of the fact that my friend Peter David has no last name — just two first names. At some point, I "adopted" Peter into the Isabella family so that he could, at long last, have a last name. And, yes, this was as dumb as it sounds, but, nonetheless, many readers were amused.

Years later, at a comics convention, while hanging out at the CBG booth, I was approached by a reader who, not quite remembering what I had written in the column, asked if it was true that Peter and I were brothers. I couldn't resist.

I began telling the reader how Peter and I were brothers, but that we had been separated at birth. It wasn't until years after we had met that we found out about it — when Peter needed a kidney and my DNA turned out to be a nearly perfect match for him. I was so good — and so bad.

I kept this absurdity up until the reader began marveling at the incredible odds that both Peter and I would end up, not just in the same line of work, but writing for the same publication. I had to tell him the truth or I would have starting rolling on the floor in helpless laughter. Fortunately, the reader — like the majority of CBG readers — had a good sense of humor.

Of course, now that I've told this story, it's only a matter of time before it makes the rounds and ends up being stated as the truth. When that happens, Peter and I will have a good laugh about it — probably at our next family reunion.)

———

What did you think of the Nick Fury made-for-television movie with David Hasselhoff?

David Reid (via e-mail)

(Not enough swimsuit scenes.

Actually, I liked a lot of it. Hasselhoff looked the part, but put too much teeth-gritting into his lines. The TV versions of various Marvel characters and concepts — like the Life Model Decoy from various S.H.I.E.L.D. comics — were nicely done. I even thought the basic plot was okay. But — — the thing was undone by the monumentally dreadful acting of the person who played Viper. Did she leave a single piece of the scenery undigested before the movie's end?

The ending could have been better, as well.

[Spoiler warning! The remainder of this response discusses the end of the Nick Fury TV movie.]

The Nick Fury movie ends with the unexpected and unexplained return to life of Viper's father, Baron Strucker, previously seen as a corpse in a glass tube. Father and daughter walk off to hatch their next plan for world domination. Yawn!

Wouldn't it have been cooler to watch the horrified faces of the Hydra agents watching Viper interacting with, not her father, but a badly-constructed Life Model Decoy of her father? Their eyes widening as the LMD's voice skips and Viper kicks it to "correct" the malfunction? Maybe an arm falling off the LMD, as the clearly insane Viper walks off into the credits?

I don't know if I'd watch this Nick Fury movie again, but, if a second were made, especially with a new actress playing Viper, I would likely give it a chance.)

Silver Age Memories

By Craig Shutt

Neat! I guess DC's idea of teaming up some of its heroes in Brave & Bold was such a success that they're giving these guys their own comic!

I'll certainly have to set aside a shiny new dime so I can buy a copy when it appears at my newsstand Aug. 25, 1960!

Now if they'd only let that swell Green Arrow join.

Announcing ComicBase™ for Windows® 95

Now you, too, can own the world's best software for comic book collectors

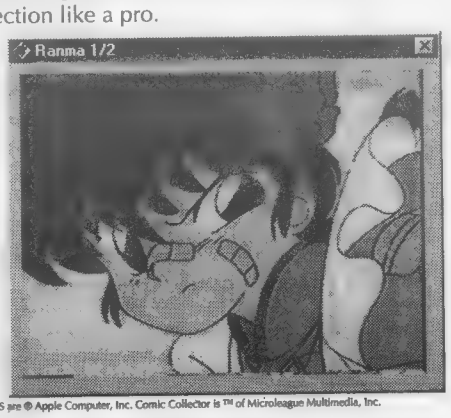
ComicBase is all you need to evaluate, build and sell your comic book collection. Sure, you'll have fun reading the reviews of over 3,000 titles, looking at the included color cover art and enjoying video previews from comic-book-related movies. And you can't beat the 70,000+ issue index that lets you easily search for important character appearances, artists, writers, storylines and more. ComicBase even includes values for each issue for the past four years and will even graph each issue's value history so you can figure out what's hype and what's hot.

But what you'll really love is ComicBase's powerful collection management features. Logging in what you own is a breeze: with just a few keystrokes, you can enter in all the information you need. You can even enter whole ranges of issues at once or import information from major spreadsheets and databases.

ComicBase automatically evaluates each comic by its condition, from poor to near mint, and cleverly handles special issues, such as autographed copies, platinum covers and giant-size issues. When you're done, you can print price lists, issue checklists, price labels and reports that tell you what you paid for your collection and what it's worth.

And best of all, it's finally available for Windows 95 and is every bit as full-featured as its highly-acclaimed Macintosh counterpart. So what are you waiting for? Call now to take control of your collection like a pro.



ComicBase 3.0 Master Edition, new for Windows 95! Only $129.

NEXT ISSUE ON SALE IN JULY!

ON SALE NOW!

The latest from: Richard Howell & Ricardo Villagran

DEADBEATS #30: The evil vampiresses Martine and Colleen have been taken captive by Dracula, and his vengeance on them is more horrifying than anything they've ever done to others. Meanwhile, Southie has a close encounter with his past. It's all in "As Bad As It Gets," the latest link in the chain of comics' premier vampire epic, by Richard (Scarlet Witch) Howell, with inks by Ricardo Villagran, and a captivating cover by Howell and Amanda Conner.

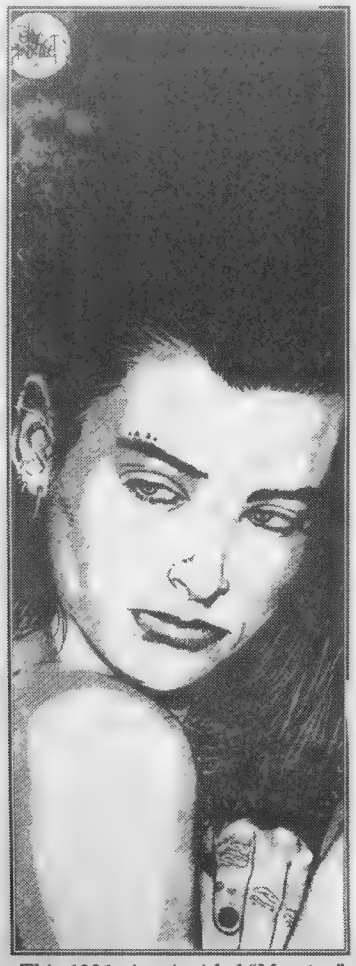
The Black (and white) world of Tim Bradstreet

By Michael Dean

The many comics and gaming fans who have been struck by Tim Bradstreet's detailed, atmospheric covers for titles like Vertigo's Unknown Soldier mini-series and his illustrations for games like Vampire, The Masquerade will be delighted to find that his work is being showcased on quality paper in a new art book, Maximum Black.

The book covers the scope of Bradstreet's work, including his gallery of urban vampires for White Wolf's role-playing mythos; the Forsaken Earth of Last Unicorn's apocalyptic trading-card game Heresy: Kingdom Come; pin-ups and covers featuring such comics characters as The Crow, Batman, and Unknown Soldier; panels from a "lost" Clive Barker comics adaptation; and photos and art from Red Sky Diary, a work in progress.

In image after image, Bradstreet conveys a kind of Gothic urban realism. Many pages appear to be portraits of scarred, gloomy denizens of a hardcore underworld where the light falls faintly on them from some distant height. Some of these characters are bad guys and some are actually good guys, but none looks like anybody you'd want to bring home to mother. Even The Dark Knight has the veins of a junkie and a utility belt full of spikes and chains. Nobody smiles.



This 1991 piece is titled "Mystére."

Early disappointments

In a new interview, Bradstreet took the time to share some of his pain with CBG readers. To hear him talk, the book, which he designed himself with Matt Sturm, is a singular triumph arising from a professional career marked by a series disappointments and failures. Not that he denied being proud of his work, but, in conversation with CBG, the artist would time and again sidestep bragging opportunities to remember the time his drawing for an album cover was rejected or the convention where a creator he admired didn't have time to talk to him. Not complaining, exactly, just — remembering.

You'd expect an artist with such a photographic style to have something of a photographic memory, and Bradstreet's extends almost back to the day of his birth 31 years ago. "I've been drawing since I can remember," he said, "and I can remember those early days very clearly. I still have my kindergarten drawings."

Like most kids, Bradstreet started out drawing stickmen, but it wasn't long before the stickmen began to bicker with one another and then wage all-out war, as The Darkness overtook their little stick-world. "I drew stickmen wars, dinosaurs, and cars — all the things little boys draw. Later, I turned to meatier versions of the same things."

At the age of 6 or 7, Bradstreet saw his first Star Trek episode. "That totally whetted my appetite for things fantastic," he said.

About the same time, he discovered comic books. "When we would go on a trip I would buy so many comics I would strip the comics racks: Kirby's Captain America, Gulacy's Master of Kung Fu, also Mad magazine. I loved John Severin, Mort Drucker, and Al Jaffee, and especially the bound-in reprints of the early parodies by Kurtzman and Elder. Things like that really get me. Walt Simonson and Archie Goodwin's Manhunter got me to cross over to DC. I read Legion of Super-Heroes from Mike Grell to Keith Giffen. Mr. Miracle got me back into Kirby. John Byrne and Terry Austin became my heroes with X-Men #113."

Bradstreet's enthusiasm for comics soon lured him to comics conventions, where he began schlepping his art around. His first memories of the professional comics world were a series of rejections, including an especially painful one from one of his heroes, who apparently was too sick or tired or preoccupied to live up to Bradstreet's dream-encounter of a lifetime. "I waited two hours to talk to him and he blew me off," Bradstreet said. Luckily, "Ron Wilson, who was sitting next to him and saw the look on my face, took time to go over my work. At that moment, I made a promise to myself that I would be generous to everyone who comes up to me. Ron Wilson taught me that."

Does that mean that Bradstreet will be available for signings of Maximum Black and other works at the Chicago comics con and the Comic-Con International in San Diego? "Yes," he said. "And there's never a charge for a convention sketch. I'm there for them because I'm one of them."

A whole new game

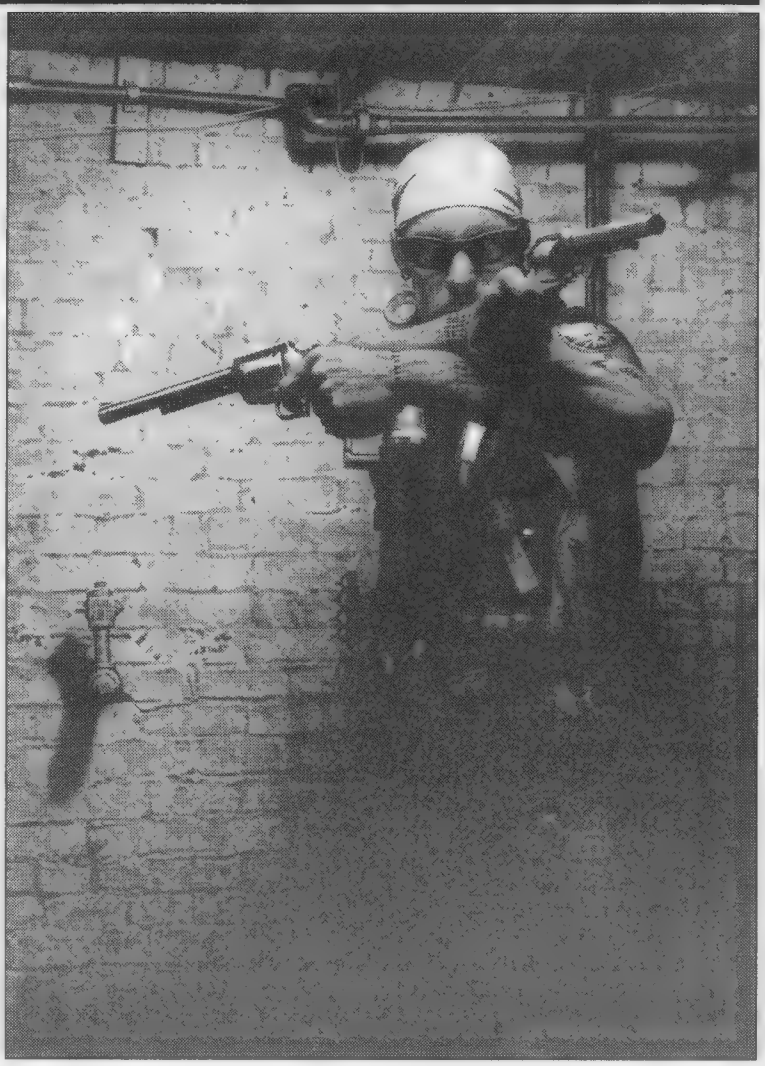
The break that finally allowed Bradstreet to turn pro was not comics work at all. "I went to cons for five or six years before I became a professional. I was in high school at the time, and all my friends were playing role-playing games, and, looking at most of the interior art, I thought, 'This stuff really sucks. I could do better. I could start out doing this and then make the crossover to comics.'"

Thematically, role-playing games were turning dark, and gamers quickly discovered that few artists could cast shadows like Bradstreet. His illustrations had a huge impact on the look and feel of such role-playing and trading-card games as Vampire, The Masquerade, Shadowrun, Battletech, Renegade Legion, Heresy, and Dark Age. His experience with gaming illustration added to his own style in important ways. First, he learned to suggest story possibilities, a life, and even a world in a single image. Second, his initial assignments for White Wolf involved pencilling on vellum over photographs, a technique that profoundly influenced the direction of his own artwork.

"I rapidly found out that just lifting images from photos wasn't going to work," said Bradstreet. "People were looking at a drawing and saying, 'Hey, I saw that in National Geographic.' So I taught myself photography. Photos were a tool and the tool became The Way. Suddenly my influences widened, and they didn't stop at comic books."

Thus evolved the complex multi-step process that lies behind Bradstreet's current art. A rough compositional concept is developed; models and props are chosen; a photo shoot is set up. "I may shoot two or three rolls of film to get one piece," he said.

Then the photos are printed backward and laid on a lightbox. Using a vellum strip that takes pencilling well, Bradstreet translates the photographic image into his own style, "pulling the stuff out that works." He ends up with what he calls a "map" of what he wants, then flips it over onto another strip of vellum and burnishes it to effect a dry transfer. In the final stage he inks his resulting pencil image, usually with a Crowquill pen, or, for color work, turns the vellum over to collaborator Grant Golleash, who produces from it what Bradstreet calls an "underpainting" in oil.



"Prodigal Son," produced in 1997, features Bradstreet's friend Joel C. Stinton.

It is a time-consuming process that means Bradstreet would, by his own estimate, require six months to produce interior sequential art for a four-issue mini-series. It also requires an asking price of $400 per page that has all but priced him out of the interior-comics-art market. "The people at Vertigo are the only ones who can afford to pay me what I make per page," he said.

His process has also inspired a number of critics who have accused his art of being more mechanical than organic. Bradstreet is well aware of these criticisms and, almost eagerly, brought them up himself: "People say 'Bradstreet traces.' I got news for these people. Everybody does. Rockwell used photographs. I've got no apologies. I'm getting the end result I want out of it and I've got my own style that goes beyond photorealism."

One of the influences Bradstreet credited with helping him to develop a style that is both personal and photographically sensitive to light is Alex Ross, with whom Bradstreet worked on the Shadowrun art. "Alex inspired me to bring myself to the next level with Shadowrun," Bradstreet said. Though he may have initially considered it a convenient stepping stone, Bradstreet said, "One thing I'll never do is turn my back on games (even when it's to the detriment of my pocketbook)."

Bradstreet finds a comics niche

Bradstreet said it was Tim Truman who opened the doors necessary to allow Bradstreet to move into comics work. He first began making a name for himself in the comics field with covers for such low-profile indy titles as The Retaliator and Dark Horse's super-hero series Comics Greatest World. His covers caught the attention of more and more fans, as his work appeared on the covers of such titles as Andrew Vachss' Hard Looks, The Crow: City of Angels, and the Vertigo series Unknown Soldier. He also has several interior art projects lined up, including a recently completed eight-page Gangland story and a story for another Vertigo anthology called Heartthrobs. Bradstreet said he hopes to do a one-shot Unknown Soldier with writer Brian Azzarello. He is also slated to ink an upcoming Grendel eight-pager.

"Also, Bernie Wrightson just introduced me to Bruce Jones, and he's going to write me something," Bradstreet said.

By now, Bradstreet has a method that works for him when doing covers. "Every character has got his own tic that sets him apart," he said. "Unknown Soldier? The bandages are the big iconic thing there, man. Think of The Invisible Man. Then there's the long trench coat. The wild eye. The grin."

Bradstreet spoke of working with the late Archie Goodwin on a Batman pin-up for Legends of the Dark Knight as one of the highlights of his comics career. "Archie really opened my eyes to what a good editor can mean. I have a respect that is unbounded for Archie Goodwin."

But, even when recalling highlights, Bradstreet preferred to dwell on the dark side. Though his pitch-black interpretation of The Dark Knight appears in Maximum Black, Bradstreet preferred to talk about his first attempt at the pin-up, which Goodwin had hated because it was on the wrong paper, there was no duo-shade effect, and Batman's head was too big. "At the time, I was at the top of gaming illustration," Bradstreet said. "I had gone from zero to bang and now here I am knocked down about 12 pegs."

It had been a shattering experience for

The unpublished Age of Desire was written by Clive Barker.

Bradstreet, which he recounted in gleeful detail for more than 15 minutes. And if that was bad, how about the time he worked with two other personal heroes, Clive Barker and P. Craig Russell, for nearly a year on a 48-page adaptation of Barker's "Age of Desire," only to see its publisher, Eclipse, fold and his final payment and most of the art vanish. It was Bradstreet's painstaking process, as well as a two-month bout with pneumonia and other misfortunes that had dragged the story's creation out for 10 months, by the end of which Bradstreet said Eclipse's Dean Mullaney had become "irate." Panels from the surviving 10 pages of the still-unpublished story appear in Maximum Black.

The Red and the Black

There were at least two topics, however, that proved capable of transforming Bradstreet's dour reflections into upbeat enthusiasm: Red Sky Diary and Maximum Black.

Red Sky Diary is Bradstreet's personal project, a tale of apocalyptic urban vampire hunting crossed with Sergio Leone. "It's epic," said Bradstreet happily. "I originally felt this would be my next sequential project, but it would have to be at least four 48-page issues. If I do a sequential story first, it would be just a small slice."

Instead, Bradstreet said he hopes to convince his friend Guillermo del Toro, director of the film Cronos, to bring the story to the big screen. If that happens, "I see myself doing an adaptation of the movie," Bradstreet said.

After that, Bradstreet said he foresees an ever-expanding franchise, à la Star Wars and Star Trek. "It all comes back to Star Trek," said Bradstreet, as if remembering a 7-year-old's vow.

Red Sky Diary may be pie in the sky at the moment, but Maximum Black is here and now. Published by Alderac Entertainment Group, the book has 128 pages with 16 color signatures. A softcover edition is priced at $24.98, while a hardcover version with endpapers and a different dustjacket is priced at $39.95. Anyone who doesn't have a copy before Wizard World Chicago can get one straight from Bradstreet at the Alderac booth.

"I've wanted to do an art book for a long time," said Bradstreet. "Art books are so inspirational to young artists and also to your peers. And this book — I look at this cover and I feel this cover. I guess I'm a little biased but I think this is one of the best-looking art books I've ever seen."

Let us leave Tim Bradstreet on this positive note, even though he would like us to stay and hear one more unhappy story about how even his friends in the band Monster Magnet rejected his lovingly drawn album cover art.

Maximum Black offers peeks behind the curtain of Bradstreet's magical realism, some titillating (the vamp on her back on page 8 is Bradstreet's wife, Missy) and some disconcerting (the dank, creepy backgrounds of moldering bricks and writhing pipework in many of his drawings are not glimpses of some apocalyptic city, but Bradstreet's Bloomington basement).

Fans will not want to miss the chance to see so much Bradstreet in one place — so much enthusiastic Blackness.

POV
POINT OF VIEW
BY Mark EVANIER

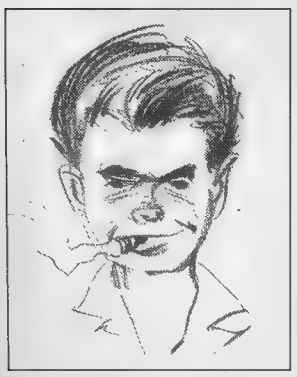
A few weeks ago in another cranny of this publication, Maggie Thompson mentioned an incident when Jack Kirby did a sketch for a fan at a convention. The kid immediately began shopping it around the dealer's room, seeing how much he could get for it. That soured Jack on ever again doing sketches at conventions.

The story is true. I thought some of you might be interested in the details.

It took place at a science-fiction gathering called the Westercon. The time was the July 4th weekend in 1969 and the locale was the Miramar Hotel in Santa Monica, Calif. I didn't attend the festivities but many of my friends did. I heard matching accounts from so many of them — including Jack's wife — that I have never doubted it happened just this way.

There was then a custom at SF cons of personalizing I.D. badges. The convention would issue you its standard, boring tag, and you'd flip the card over and doodle something more colorful on the obverse side — your name in fancy lettering, with perhaps a drawing. If you weren't artistically inclined, you might seek out another to do the honors. At a few cons, I recall, artists would charge $5 or so to do this, perhaps for some charitable concern, perhaps to buy beer.

"One of the indignities an artist must sometimes suffer is that people think that what they do is effortless. It doesn't cost anything — they just sit down and do it, right?"



Jack Kirby's self-portrait.

Jack was not a Guest of Honor — or a Guest of Anything — at the Westercon. He and his spouse had recently moved to southern California and were eager to make some contact with the local fans and professional community. As there were no comic conventions in the state at the time — no San Diego Con yet, even — Jack and Roz showed up at the Miramar and paid the admission price.

Quickly, it got around the place that Jack ("King") Kirby was on the premises. There were enough comics fans present for this to create quite a ripple. The comic-book business then seemed almost wholly based in New York, and the local fans had never met anyone who actually drew comics. They'd have been excited to meet a second-string letterer — so one can only imagine the fervor over the man who was then Marvel's star artist.

Jack loved to talk to fans and, throughout his life, gave them as much of his time as he could spare, and maybe a little more beyond that. He was standing there, answering queries about Thor and Fantastic Four and Captain America when one kid asked to have his badge decorated.

"We all do childish, insensitive things when we're 17. There are no exceptions to this rule, and, if you think you're one, you probably did more than your share."

I know his name. He is still embarrassed for his actions that day and he shouldn't be. I mean, it was a childish, insensitive thing to do, but we all do childish, insensitive things when we're 17. There are no exceptions to this rule, and, if you think you're one, you probably did more than your share.

Since he's sorry and it's been 29 years, I won't identify the fellow. Call him Ishmael. He pointed out to Mr. Kirby how everyone had their badges enhanced and said, "Will you do mine?"

Jack was never wild about doing sketches in public. To him, drawing was a very private, personal thing that demanded his undiluted attention. The worst drawings I ever saw Jack do were done with someone watching, but he would occasionally make the attempt, rather than disappoint someone.

So he took the kid's badge and, on the back, drew a little head of Thor and a word balloon that said, "By Odin! It's Ishmael!" Everyone around oohed and ahhed, and Ishmael looked enormously happy. Then he turned around and, in a voice that carried clear across the dealers' room, yelled —

"Kirby original art for sale!"

Roz told me this story, not once, but on several occasions. "Jack had just drawn this thing for the kid," she said. "He didn't waste a second. To him, the value of Jack's work was that he could get 10 bucks for it."

One of the indignities an artist must sometimes suffer is that people think that what they do is effortless. It doesn't cost anything — they just sit down and do it, right?

I mean, a carpenter has to buy wood, and he has to have all these expensive tools, and it takes a lot of physical effort to make anything. So when we meet a woodworker at a party, we don't say to him, "Say, how about making me a free dinette set?" Carpentry is work.

But drawing a picture? Well, that doesn't take a lot of supplies — some paper (paper's cheap) — a pencil (I have a pencil) — and, if you're fast, as Kirby was or as many artists are, well, it's just a little of their time, right? I mean, Jack Kirby would gladly talk to me at a convention for 10 minutes — so why couldn't he use that 10 minutes to do me a drawing of The Thing? Doesn't cost him anything. No big deal. He'll never miss it.

That's not me talking, but every artist knows the rhetoric. Sometimes, people try to minimize the request — "just a quick, tiny sketch" — and sometimes they lay on a little guilt ...

"It would mean so much to me..."

"It's for this relative of mine who's sick and confined to bed ..."

"I'll never sell it, I swear. I'll frame it and put it up over my desk ..."

Usually, all this is absolutely sincere, and, often, the artist would love to make the person happy with a cherished memento. But there are problems with that and they are often more emotional than financial.

I was with a top artist one day in a restaurant, and, from hearing snatches of our conversation, the waiter caught on that this guy drew comic books. "Did you ever draw Superman?" he asked. The artist nodded that, yes, he'd drawn Superman.

"I've always loved Superman," the waiter announced. "Could you do a drawing for me of Superman? It won't take any of your time. You could do it while you wait for your cheeseburger."

The artist was a very nice fellow, but there was something about the way the request was voiced. He turned to the waiter and — with a note of pain and a wee bit of outrage — proclaimed, "Hey, that's how I make my living. You get paid for what you do —"

The waiter reacted as if slapped rightfully in the face. He apologized profusely (about eight times) and seemed so sorry for asking that the artist wound up leaving a nice Superman sketch along with the tip.

We talked about it in the car afterward. On the one hand, if you have a talent that brings joy to people, you probably want to share that talent — might even enjoy showing off a bit. But you're also proud of your talent. You don't want people trivializing it or acting as if it's of so little value that you can be expected to give it away to strangers. You certainly don't want to give it away to someone who, like our pal Ishmael, is just going to sell it. And, if you do one for this kid, then that kid wants one and that kid and that kid and that kid —

It's an awkward dilemma.

These days at comics conventions, one can often find an area called Artists' Alley, where professional comics artists hawk their originals and do sketches for small fees. Some are there just for the money, no doubt about it — but I suspect for many, it matters as much that the fee solves all aspects of that awkward dilemma. They don't have to worry about being hit up for endless freebees or feeling exploited. (And if they've paid their own way to the con, as most do, they also don't minimize the guilt — the feeling they should have stayed home, saved the travel and hotel costs and spent the weekend on paying work.)

What many artists charge for sketches strikes me as a supreme bargain. A couple of times, I've suggested to one that he up his price — but they never do. As I said, it's not just the money; it's that it solves the problem of folks who want free drawings. Or, at least, it's one way.

Another is the way Mr. Kirby solved it. At that precise moment that Ishmael started taking bids on the Thor badge, Jack decided he would never again do a sketch at a convention — and he never did. With a couple of exceptions.

Most of the time, he just said no. It hurt to disappoint a fan but he had to say no — or allow Roz or someone else to say no on his behalf. I did it a number of times. At a convention, Roz would sometimes say to me, "I'm going to the ladies' room. Stay next to him and say no to people until I get back."

My greatest achievement in this area, however, came one time when Jack was nowhere to be seen. It happened in 1970, shortly after I started working weekends as his generally unnecessary assistant. For a brief time, I spent my weekdays at a company called Marvelmania, which was taking orders for — and occasionally even sending out — Marvel posters and decals and such. Someday, I shall have to clear a month or three in this column and tell the long, sordid tale of that operation.

There was a devout Marvel fan named Arnold who came around from time to time, not more than once an hour, each time finding a novel way to annoy me. One day, he said, "Hey, I hear you're working now with Jack Kirby. How about getting him to do me a sketch?"

I told Arnold in non-ambiguous terms that this was not possible. I would not ask Jack Kirby for a sketch — not for me and certainly not for someone else. I could not have been clearer.

The next day, Arnold came around the office and asked me, "Have you got my Kirby sketch yet?"

"Perhaps you didn't hear me," I told him. "I told you that I would not ask Jack for a sketch for you. I haven't asked him for one for me and I certainly am not going to ask him for one for you."

The next day, Arnold came around the office and asked me, "Have you got my Kirby sketch yet?"

I repeated what I'd said the day before except that, this time, I added a few insults and a few vulgarisms. I may even have compared his general demeanor to that of a farm animal or two.

The next day, Arnold came around the office and asked me, "Have you got my Kirby sketch yet?"

This went on for two weeks. Even when I informed him that I would not be seeing or speaking with Kirby for a while, my tormenter would be back the next day to ask, "Have you got my Kirby sketch yet?"

One afternoon, he was especially exasperating. He waltzed into the office and asked, "Any news on my Kirby sketch?"

I said, "Yes. You're not getting one."

"I'd really like Captain America," he said. "But Thor might be nice — or The Silver Surfer. Oh, you know what I'd really like? The Fantastic Four! The Fantastic Four with The Silver Surfer in the background. And maybe Galactus. Oh, and can you get Kirby to color it?"

"Get out of my office," I told him, adding a few cheap threats and squibs of character assassination. I had reached the stage where I felt something had to be done.

Now, I happen to be a terrific forger. I'm not much of an artist but I can forge with the best of them. Kirby liked the way I did his signature so much, he used to hand me my paychecks unsigned and tell me to write in his name. The evening after Arnold drove me to the brink, I sat down and whipped up a bogus Kirby drawing of Captain America. I signed it, "To my dear friend Arnold, Best Wishes, Jack Kirby." It wouldn't have fooled an expert but it was good enough for my purpose.

The next afternoon, when Arnold came by to badger me, he found the door to the office locked. He began pounding on it, yelling my name and demanding, "When do I get my Kirby sketch?" I walked up to the door, whipped out the drawing and held it up so he could see it through the glass. You have never seen a happier person in your life. He was so overjoyed, tears came to his eyes. Weeping with joy, he began to thank me over and over, telling me it was just what he'd dreamed of and he would treasure it forever and that I should hurry up and open the door and hand it to him. I let him gaze longingly at the drawing for a few more seconds …

… and then I set fire to it.

I am telling you the story of the cruelest thing I ever did in my life. At first, I just held the match near the bottom of the paper. Arnold looked properly horrified but he knew I was kidding. I wouldn't set fire to a Jack Kirby sketch. Would I?

But then I let the flame touch the bottom of the paper, and he reacted in utter shock. This was carrying the joke too far.

Slowly, the fire began to work its way up the page in the direction of Captain America. Through the glass, I could see and hear Arnold pleading. If I'd blown the fire out quickly, he could still have trimmed away the burned part and had a complete, frameable drawing.

As it reached the "Kirby" autograph, Arnold gasped, "No, no, no!" He was crying and begging and sobbing and moaning but it didn't do any good. In seconds, Captain America was completely destroyed.

So was Arnold.

He staggered away from the door and I never saw him again —

— except that for days after, I was haunted by the look on his tortured, agonized face — that look of sheer ecstasy suddenly replaced by a pained and desperate plea for compassion. I decided my little jest had been needlessly brutal and inhuman and that basic human decency demanded that I seek out Arnold, confess to my ruse, and ask his forgiveness.

One of these days, when I have some spare time, I fully intend to do this.

SUPER TRADERS

Super Trader ads are available for $110.00 each. Super Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 5" x 5" size. Super Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Super Trader ads.

SUPER TRADERS

Super Trader ads are available for $110.00 each. Super Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 5" x 5" size. Super Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Super Trader ads.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $41.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

Discounted rare key DCs/Marvels for sale: These books are some of the rarest copies of key books offered in the past few years for sale. I cherry-picked them from 1987-1997. References available upon request. Postage is $5.00. 7-day return policy. Satisfaction guaranteed, or full refund. This is my 25th ad in the CBG. Call for details.

FANTASTIC FOUR #1
F+ condition. Bright colors and gloss. Some cover/spine wear Creamy/off white pages. Name/address stamp top of last art page. No chipping. 100% unrestored. Price: $3,700 3,000

BRAVE AND THE BOLD #31 VF+ condition. White pages! Rare. Price: $300 Sold

BRAVE AND THE BOLD #34 White pages
Has a couple of creases. Bright color and gloss. A NM spine. A Massachusetts collection book with white pages. Solid F/VF. Gorgeous! Price: $800 500

FLASH #105
Beautiful gloss and colors. 1 small cover tear(1/8"), light wear (i.e., scuffing) lower two inches along the margin line and 1/4 inch corner crease. Nice page color & beautiful spine. Overall, VF- and rarely found in this condition. A treasure to behold. Price: $2,000 1800

SHOWCASE #22 White pages
White pages and insides. Has a light vertical crease that runs parallel to the spine. The book looks much better. It's difficult to grade, but it's one of the nicest copy you'll see advertised. Call it FN+, but the grade is irrelevant. Lucky you if you get this book. Price: $2,000 1900

BRAVE AND THE BOLD #28
Very nice F/VF. Looks much better. Nice pages and corners. Glossy and colorful. Light spine cesses and one light 1/2" corner crease (unnoticeable). Price: $2,000 1800

SPIDER MAN #149-151 Mint set Price: $60 50

Also: Nice Bart Starr and John Unitas rookie football cards for sale. Call...

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $41.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

PHANTOM - (7) FB57+ Harrer Hits 56.1.15.36.44.48. F-NM. Overstreet $760 for - $675
Other comic mag lots -
ROY ROGERS - 18 issues from #67 to #90. Mainly NM and now should list at over $400 in Overstreet and should be a good buy at only - $260
ROY ROGERS & TRIGGER - 17 issues from #92 on with an Overstreet value of over $500 for a low net of $200
SUPER DEAL of 44 diff nice condition comic mags - Tonto, Tomahawk, Indian Chief,Ben Bowie & various Dell movie issues like The Vikings. Most are Dell in the 1950's & 1960's with an Overstreet value of over $700. A real bargain at - $400
Here's a couple of single ones -
JUNGLE #69 VF at $120 MILITARY #38 VG at $95
ADVENTURE #75 ab.VG but fc badly chipped so only $150 BATMAN #65 VF/NM a beaut -$500
PICTURE STORIES FROM THE BIBLE - Complete Old Testament edition and the Complete New Testament edition about fine with the Old Testament in F-VF. These list out at $160 in Overstreet. I'll sell both for - $100

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $41.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

Trader Tips

The Trader ads in CBG are an easy and economical way to advertise. Simply design your ad in a space that is 8½" wide by 8½" high and send it along with payment ($41.00 per Trader space) and complete reference form to:

COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE
Advertising Department
700 E. State Street
Iola, WI 54990-0001

We'll reduce your ad to the proper size and place it in the issue(s) you request. If no specific issue(s) is requested, we'll run your ad in the next available issue.

Keep in mind that CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or symbols to Trader ads. The better your ad looks when you send it to us, the better it will look when it is reduced and published in CBG.

The advertisers' index is provided as a reader service. Occasional last minute changes may result in ads appearing on pages other than those listed here. The publisher assumes no liability for omissions or errors.

GENERAL INFORMATION

A. PAYMENT: Ads must be accompanied by payment. You may pay with a check, money order, or credit card.

B. CREDIT CARDS: We will accept the following credit cards: VISA, MasterCard, American Express, Novus.

C. DEADLINE: For all advertising is 4:00 p.m. each Tuesday, unless otherwise stated on deadline card.

D. TERMS: Cash with copy only. All advertisers must provide information for the confidential use of the publisher should questions arise.

E. CONTRACT RATES are available for 6, 13, 26, or 52 consecutive issues. Contract rates apply to fulfillment of contract items. Cancellation of a contract by the advertiser allows the publisher to reinvoice covered ads at the earned rate. This rate card is a part of the advertising contract.

F. MINORS are required to furnish a statement of responsibility from their parent or guardian before their advertising can be accepted.

G. ERRORS: Typewritten copy is recommended. The publisher is not responsible for errors resulting from long-hand or illegible copy, or changes submitted by telephone. The publisher's liability for any error shall not exceed the cost of the space occupied by that error.

H. LAYOUT and design services are provided by Krause Publications for advertisers who do not submit camera-ready copy. Due to the creative and subjective nature of these services, credit will not be allowed for conceptual variations.

I. GRADING: Items offered in any ad must be properly described as to condition, conforming to the standards set forth in Comics Buyer's Guide Price Guide. Advertisers may also exercise the option of grading offerings by applying a unique personal system, providing the standards applied are detailed in the ad to avoid confusion.

J. RETURN PRIVILEGE: Except as otherwise specified in any ad, an advertiser must accept the return of any merchandise postmarked within ten working days of its receipt by a customer.

K. P.O. BOX ADS are allowed, but the permanent home address, phone number and place of business of the advertiser must be filed with the publisher before advertisements may be printed.

L. SPECIAL PAGE POSITIONS are available at a premium, inquire for details.

M. ADVERTISING AGENCIES: There are no agency discounts.

N. CAMERA READY display ads qualify for a 15% discount. Copy must be ready for camera without additional paste-up or film work required. No charge for reproductions, enlargements or mail response key change. Classified Display, Comics Trader, Collector's Showcase and classified word ads do not qualify for the camera ready discount.

O. SPACE RESERVATIONS available for camera ready ads only. Must be made prior to ad deadline. Reserved space must be paid for even if ad does not arrive on time.

P. PRE-PRINTED INSERTS are available in Comics Buyer's Guide. Inquire for additional information and technical specifications.

Q. CIRCULATION is throughout the United States and Canada by subscription and single copy sales by agents in shops and other outlets.

R. PROOF OF PUBLICATION: Tear sheets of new display ads are mailed to those advertisers requesting this service. We regret we cannot provide this service to classified advertisers.

S. NOTE: All advertising orders are accepted subject to the terms and provisions of the current rate card. Krause Publications, Inc. reserves the right to decline advertising or suspend advertising privileges for such periods of time as in its discretion it sees fit, for any reason, whatsoever, irrespective of the validity of the reasons for such declination or suspension. The forwarding of an order is construed as acceptance of all rates and conditions in effect at the time the advertising is submitted. The publisher will not be bound by any conditions, printed or otherwise, appearing on any order for advertising space, billing instructions or copy instructions which conflict with its policies. Advertisers and advertising agencies assume liability for all content (including text representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assumes responsibility of any claims arising therefrom made against the publisher. It is the advertiser's or agency's responsibility to obtain appropriate releases on any item or individual pictured in their advertising. All agreements are subject to strikes, accidents, acts of God, or other contingencies beyond the publisher's control. The publisher reserves the right to edit any advertising copy to conform with its standard advertising policies, and to reject any ad which in its opinion is unethical or objectional for any reason.

The TruBatman Show, Part 2

The arctic wasteland stretched before him.

Bruce Wayne drew the white camouflage more tightly around himself, approaching the entrance he knew was waiting for him. He'd been there before, any number of times, but it had always been under carefully controlled circumstances. It had never been like this, never in some sort of skulking manner. And never, ever, under a circumstance where he felt that he could trust no one.

They had all turned against him.

Beneath the encompassing folds of his hood, Bruce smiled grimly. Many years ago, Dick had convinced him to watch Invasion of the Body Snatchers. It was, Dick had said, the ultimate in paranoid fantasy. On that basis, he had figured that Bruce would connect with it. Pride had prevented Bruce from admitting that Dick had been absolutely right.

That's what it had become like for Bruce. Everyone around him had begun to take on a different, sinister form. For the first time, it seemed as if they were all hiding something.

It gave him pause, as he thought about his life. Thought about the times when he had been investigating the murder of his parents, only to be distracted from it by the Batsignal illuminating the sky. Thought about the occasions when he had considered giving it all up, only to find some new and greater threat presented him, something he could not ignore. Most significantly, he thought about the time when he had faced opponent after opponent, become so worn down that, deep within, he'd questioned whether it was time to hang it up. And then Bane had broken his back — and suddenly nothing became more important than making himself once more into the man he had been.

Bruce slipped, his feet going out from under him, and he fell hard to the icy surface. He lay there for a moment, taking a drag on the oxygen and reinvigorating himself, before hauling himself to his feet and continuing his quest.

Ever since that creature with Kryptonian markings had fallen from the sky, he had suspected that his answers would lie with Superman. But Superman had suddenly gone missing, informing the rest of the Justice League that he had had to attend to a "mission in space."

It had smacked too much of convenience.

Because it had happened just about the same time as the abrupt crime wave that had swept Gotham. And then earthquakes: earthquakes, of all things, even though — last time Bruce had checked — there were no fault lines beneath the city. And the decision to abandon Gotham, to force all the citizens out because it was ostensibly unsalvageable, in defiance of the constitution of the United States. Bruce had tried to get a protest going, but no lawyer had seemed interested in handling the case. Not even Ingersoll.

All of it, collapsing down around Bruce — and once upon a time, he would have considered it a mass of problems to which he had to attend.

Now he saw them as distractions. Distractions and nothing more. Uncanny in their timing, bizarre in their conception.

It had taken everything he had to turn his back to them. Even now, he fancied he could hear their voices crying out to him, the shouts of desperation:

"Batman, why have you abandoned us?"

"Batman, where are you in our time of need?"

"Batman ... Batman ... Batman ... dadadadadadadadada ... Batman!"

His vision began to become hazy, and for a moment he fancied he saw the signal in the sky. He closed his eyes tightly, turned away, and, when he looked again, it was gone.

And then, not far ahead, he saw the entrance. The hidden entrance to Superman's Fortress of Solitude.

There were booby traps, of course, dangers guarding the way, but he was able to bypass them. He had, after all, trained his entire life for this. The detection devices of the Fortress did not even register his presence. All of his abilities and skills helped him to glide past them. Once inside, he shed the white garb which had hidden his presence out on the frozen wasteland and he drew his cape around him, feeling in some strange way alive for the first time.

Then he heard noise: voices from not too far ahead of him. The tall, glistening walls didn't seem to have any shadows about them at all, yet Batman managed to find them and hide within them. He drew near the sound of the voices, and they were all chattering briskly in another language — a language Batman surmised was Kryptonian. He wasn't entirely sure why it made sense to deduce that — but it did, nonetheless.

He found one room and peered in. There were several men and women there, and there was a vast array of monitors. They appeared to be checking out sites, methodically and steadily. Many of them looked exhausted, as if they'd been at it for hours — even days. Batman squinted slightly, not sure that he was seeing what he was seeing.

They were viewing all over the world, but several of the spots seemed to be such familiar venues as Wayne Manor. The Batcave. Commissioner Gordon's office. The Batmobile — yes, there was one angle there that suggested there was some sort of a camera in the dashboard of the Batmobile itself. But how, how was it possible? It made no sense.

He had to find Superman. Had to sort it all out.

Then his attention was drawn more closely to one of the people on the monitors. What caught his attention was that the man bore a passing resemblance to the man beneath the mask of Batman. His hair was grayed, but he looked like —

— like —

As if sensing that he was being watched, the man at the monitor suddenly turned, frowning in confusion. But Batman had already ducked from sight.

Batman — was afraid.

He had never felt that way before, no matter how abysmal life had become for him, no matter how daunting the challenge. Fear was something that had been alien to his makeup.

But now he sensed that he was on the verge of something. Something truly horrifying, something that cut to the core of everything that he was — or thought he was.

Father? The word echoed in his head, and it was everything he could do not to give voice to it. He wanted to run back into the room, to confront the man, to ask for an explanation of the inexplicable. He had to be mistaken. Except —

He pushed the thought from his mind. He needed to know more. Before he engaged in any such face-to-face, he had to know more.

He slipped away, passing by the zoo, the area where Superman kept life forms from around the galaxy, usually the last of their kind, so they would be preserved.

He noticed something immediately: They weren't moving.

For a second, but only a second, he thought they were asleep. But then he saw several of them in some sort of mid-activity position. It was as if they'd been — shut off. Like something in Disneyland, deactivated until such time as a new array of tourists showed up.

He kept moving, his booted feet making no noise whatsoever on the Fortress floor.

Then he heard more voices. Again, they were speaking in that bizarre tongue. Except, this time, he recognized several of them. He couldn't quite believe it, and part of him screamed within his head that he was mistaken. But, no, they were clear and distinct and eminently recognizable.

A door loomed before him. He hesitated only a moment. A lesser man would have hesitated longer, possibly even would have turned away. But he was not a lesser man. At least, he didn't think he was.

He shoved the door open and all the voices came to a stop at once. Dozens of pairs of eyes stared at him in clear shock and confusion.

The Joker, without his makeup, drinking coffee. Two-Face, with the scarred side of his face healed, reading a book. Catwoman, playing what appeared to be some sort of card game with Commissioner Gordon. Tim Drake, talking with ... with ...

Jason Todd, who was busy cleaning up a table covered with litter and food scraps.

The room was filled with tables, chairs, vending machines, and people. People from throughout Batman's life, all relaxed and interacting and behaving as if this was the most normal thing in the world — until Batman walked into the middle of it, Alice through the looking glass.

They rose as one, but no one said a word. There seemed nothing that they could possibly say.

"Bruce —"

Batman whirled and saw a familiar blue-and-red-clad figure behind him.

"I think we have to talk," said Superman.
